PREFACE

"PROMINENT PEOPLE" is designed by the publishers to provide a record of the men and women who, in one capacity or another, are contributing to and making possible the growth and development of the Maritime Provinces. In former times the history of a country could be traced in the biographies of its great men; but in these days of democratic institutions and universal franchise, the true history of a country is the record of the masses, for it is the masses who, through their representatives and by their individual services and sacrifices, give to a country a noble or ignoble place among the nations.

Public memories, sometimes, are short-lived, and history records only the names of those who stand out most prominently in the great events of the times. The aim of "Prominent People" is to create a lasting memorial not only for the great men, but also for those lesser personages in all walks of life who, by their toil and sacrifices, are laboring for the advancement of the Maritime Provinces, and are the real moulders of their destinies. The publication of such a work is especially appropriate at this time to commemorate the services rendered both at home and abroad by so many of our men and women during the recent Great War, in the interests of the Empire and the cause of democracy throughout the world.

This book is not designed as a work of praise, but of facts. One's education, professional or business training and experiences and status in the community are facts which no man or woman should hesitate to see in print, and which the public have a right to know.

The book will have a value for the historian quite beyond its use as a current work of reference. It is hoped it will do its part in making all the sons and daughters of these three Provinces better known to each other, and will give a bird's-eye view of their usefulness and contribution to the confederated Provinces of the Dominion.

Considerable care has been taken to secure accuracy, but if mistakes occur—as they are liable to occur in a work of this nature—we shall be grateful if they are called to our attention so that they may be rectified in future editions.

THE EDITOR.

B., Eastern Canada's largest departmental house, in 1902; returned to newspaper work in 1905, as advertising manager of the Sun-Star newspapers; took up theatrical and moving picture management in 1907, at the inception of the picture business.

After managing historic Mechanic's Institute (otherwise known as York Theatre and the Nickel) for the Keith-Albee interests for seven years, the American lessees were induced by their local representative to erect a modern combination theatre on King Square, subsequently known as the Imperial Theatre, which worthily succeeds the famous Lanergan's Lyceum, famed in the fifties and sixties for the players of international repute who treaded its stage whilst enjoying summer vacations, an idea that met with much favor amongst the great actors and actresses of America, and naturally a delight to the people of this section of Canada. During the Great War the Imperial Theatre aptly lived up to its name in war work, being devoted almost continually to recruiting efforts, fund raising, entertainments and mass meetings addressed by federal ministers and traveling notables. During an influenza epidemic, when theatres were closed, it assisted in selling $100,000 worth of Victory Bonds. In 1913, Mr. Golding went to Vancouver, B. C., as an advertising man to prepare and place systematic publicity for a town site located in the northern part of the Province on the new Grand Trunk Pacific line. This campaign entailed a large expenditure and covered the Metropolitan press of United States and Canada. Other lines of publicity handled by Mr. Golding have been personal electoral campaigns of two federal ministers in his native New Brunswick, drives for philanthropic objects, and for a number of years the preparation and placing of copy for the St. John Exhibition. Secretary-Treasurer of the Pythian Castle Co., Ltd.; director of the St. John Protestant Orphans' Home; Trustee of Central Baptist Church, also of St. John Exhibition Association.

His great-grandfather was one of four brothers who settled in Truro in 1762, three years after the first settlers arrived from New England. Four generations have spent their lives in Truro, and were active members in promoting the rebuilding of the community in their day and generation. The father died in 1861, when the subject of our sketch was barely three years old, but his mother survived till 1915. In 1856, assisted in the survey of Port Aux-Basque, Newfoundland and Aspe Bay in Cape Breton, for information of the Cable Company. Assisted in piloting cable ship between those places, and in landing the shore ends of the cable. This was the first link in cable connections between Europe and America. In the winter of 1860-61 served on board the flagship "Nile," under Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, K. C.B., visiting all the British possessions in the West Indies. In the spring of 1861, returned to the hydrographic survey under Captain Orlebar; surveyed the Straits of Belle Isle and Heart's Content, Newfoundland, and assisted in landing the shore end of the Atlantic cable at the latter place. In Apr., 1864, was appointed to H.M.S. "Formidable," flagship at the Nore, and in September of same year was appointed to H.M.S. "Duncan," flagship on the North American and West India Station, under Sir James Hope, G.C.B. While serving in H.M.S. "Duncan" the Jamaica Rebellion broke out in 1865. The H.M.S. "Duncan" took from Halifax the 17th Regt.

to that Island, and was successful in suppressing the uprising of the Negro population which had been planned and commenced. In 1866, the Fenian Raid broke out between the United States and Canada. H.M.S. "Duncan" returned from Jamaica to Halifax and took the same Regiment from Halifax to St. Andrews, N. B., and was successful in repelling the Fenian Raiders from the borders of New Brunswick. Received the Fenian Raid (1866) Medal from the British Government for services on that occasion. In 1867, H.M.S. "Duncan" was replaced by H.M.S. "Royal Alfred" Admiral Sir Geo. Rodney Mundy, K. C. B., as Admiral Hope's period of services on that station expired; proceeded to Sheerness, England, and paid off. In Aug-1867, was appointed to H.M.S. "Victory" (Nelson's old ship) flagship at Portsmouth, under Captain F. Beauchamp Seymour, who subsequently was Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean and bombarded Alexandria, Egypt, in the Arabi War, and for his services was promoted and given the title of Lord Alcester. He will be remembered as being the officer who ordered the signal to Lord Charles Beresford on that occasion. "Well done Condor," she having approached very closely to, and bombarded the forts at Alexandria successfully. In 1868, Mr. Hyndman was appointed to H.M.S. "Newport," under Captain G. S. Nares (afterwards Admiral Sir Geo. S. Nares, of Arctic fame), and proceeded to the Mediterranean. This ship was commissioned for surveying duties on that station, their first work being a survey of Alexandria, Egypt, and sounding the whole route, 817 miles from Malta, after which she piloted the cable ship from Malta to Alexandria, and assisted in landing the shore ends. Afterwards made surveys of Carthage, Tunis, the Island of Sicily, and the Straits of Messina. Visited Cario and saw the sun rise from the top of the great Pyramid. Also visited Joppa and Jerusalem, the Island of Crete, and many other interesting places. In 1869, accompanied H.M. the Empress of the French, Francis Joseph, Emperor of Austria, the Crown Prince Frederick William of Prussia, the Viceroy of Egypt, and many other persons of note, on the opening ceremony of the Suez Canal from Port Said to Suez; and afterward the "Newport" made a complete hydrographic survey of that Canal from the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, spending the winter of 1869-70 therein. In Sept., 1870, accepted retirement from the Navy under "Childer's Scheme of Retirement for Naval Officers" to clear the overcrowded lists. Then returned to England and thence to Prince Edward Island, after spending two months with friends in Scotland and the North of Ireland. In 1871, was appointed Marshal of the Vice Admiralty Court in P. E. I., by the Imperial Government, and on many occasions acted as Nautical Assessor to that Court. In 1871, the Prince Edward Island Railway Bill was passed by the Provincial Government, and Mr. Hyndman was appointed Secretary to the Railway Board. In 1873, the railway was taken over by the Dominion Government, on the Province entering Confederation, and Board of Directors was no longer required. In 1876, was appointed Provincial Auditor by the Provincial Government, and in 1877 laid the Provincial Accounts before the Local Assembly for the first time in printed form. In 1879, resigned the auditorship and went into insurance business, receiving the agency of several first-class fire, marine and life insurance companies. In 1883, appointed Vice-Consul for the United States of America—resigned in 1888, having been acting Consul for several months previously. Owing to the seizure of American vessels for breaches of the Fishery Treaty, the dual position of Consul and Marshal of the Vice Admiralty Court, were found to be incompatible. In 1891, was appointed a Justice of the Peace. In 1892, appointed Lloyd's agent for P. E. I. In 1898, was honored with "The Liberty of the City of Reading," Pennsylvania. Spent the three years following his graduation as book agent, clerk and other business occupations; later decided to study law and was articled to a practising barrister at Halifax; called to the Bar Dec. 31, 1870; practised for a number of years in Halifax, then moved to Bridgetown, Annapolis Co., N. S.; engaged for some years in promoting cheese and butter factories, also organized a company to carry on brick making at Bridgetown, which later failed; promoted the building of a railway from Middleton through Granville on the north side of the Annapolis River, under the North Mountain to Port Wade, on the Annapolis Basin. Several years were spent in the construction of this railway which was later subsidized through the efforts of Mr. Irvin by both the Dominion and local governments. Although the company failed, the railway was completed, chiefly through the efforts of Mr. Irvin, and is a splendid thing for the country through which it passes. It is now part of the Canadian National Railways. Has contributed many articles to the press on the welfare and morals of the community. About fifty years ago when Nova Scotian law permitted imprisonment for debt long after English and American law had abolished it, Mr. Irvin wrote a series of articles on the subject which were published in the Halifax Morning Chronicle for many months, and which so aroused public thought that imprisonment for debt was abolished at the next session of the House of Assembly. Mr. Irvin has always taken a deep interest in the early history of Nova Scotia, and has contributed to the press a number of articles on this subject. He has also read several papers before the Historical Society at Halifax, among which is one on John Young, the first Secretary of Agriculture for Nova Scotia, delivered Feb. 25, 1908, and also one on the History of Bridgetown, delivered Jan. 2, 1914.
