JAPAN—The concerts scheduled to take place all over the country Dec. 1 as part of the Act Against Aids (AAA) campaign (Billboard, Oct. 9) are shaping up to be perhaps the greatest collection of Japanese musical talent ever. Among those performing at Nippon Budokan will be Keisuke Kuwata of the Southern All Stars, Teruya Rinken of the Rinken Band, and Misato Watanabe. Kuwata has written material especially for this show which he says he will never perform or record again. Tickets for the Budokan gig sold out in 45 minutes. Meanwhile, over at Tokyo's Yoyogi Olympic Pool, the lineup includes Toshi of X Japan, Bakufu Slump, and Reiichi Nakaido. On a somewhat different note, singers such as Anri and Sayuri Ishikawa will perform at Tokyo's Orchard Hall backed by the Tokyo Symphony Orchestra, while down in Osaka an "unplugged" concert at Osaka Castle Hall will feature various acoustic acts. Meanwhile, AAA organizers say they are approaching several well-known foreign artists about taping special video messages in support of the campaign to be aired during the concerts. Proceeds from ticket sales will go to AIDS charities chosen by the participating art-STEVE McCLURE

U.K.—A return to melodramatic, swaggering pop is being engineered by My Life Story, a 12-piece band on the independent Mother Tongue label, whose debut single "Girl A, Girl B, Boy C" has won national radio airplay in recent weeks. Produced by Giles Martin, son of "fifth Beatle" George, and mixed by Pat Collier (the Wonder Stuff), the track boasts an enjoyably over-the-top horn arrangement and gains added theatricality by the flamboyant vocal performance of leader and songwriter Jake Shillingford. Boldly incorporating a string quartet and brass section, this giant among pop bands was founded by Shillingford in 1990. Recent gigs have included a support slot on Blur's British tour. Now armed with a publishing deal with Big Life Music, My Life Story is working on its debut album.

SWEDEN-Now that acts as diverse as dance-pop duo Stakka Bo and the eccentric, David Bowie-influenced Di Leva are making waves all over Europe, it can't be long before the extraordinary Fleshquartet follow suit. The seven-piece band's latest album, "Flow" (MVG/ MNW), has been hailed as a masterpiece, and rightly so. Featuring the vocals of Freddie Wadling, with guest contributions from that most ethereal of Scandinavian singers, Stina Nordenstam, the album is a cocktail of rock, rap, and classical music with a kick that is little short of celestial. The standout track is "Walk," a breathtaking concoction that shimmers like fine spray and then thunders like surf hitting a distant shore. Wadling's gruff, neo-Tom Waits growl and Nordenstam's crystalline tone harmonize in a rousing chorus mantra of "Love, peace, happiness, eternity/All these walk with me . . . how teases out a new mystical resonance from a very old theme. Owing to a childhood trauma, Wadling, now 41, began life as a mute, unable to speak a word until the age of 19. Then he heard the Mothers Of Invention and "suddenly there was something with life in it, something that could give me an escape for my feelings and thoughts and brought strength to myself." He formed the first Swedish-language punk band, Liket Liver (the Living Corpse) and later co-founded the critically acclaimed Cortex and the Leather Nun. The Fleshquartet, which began in the early 1980s as a quartet of classically trained musicians, now incorporates a drummer, a violinist, two cellists, a percussionist, and a viola player. Combining everything from Arabic and Indian influences with blazing blues and hip-hop grooves, this is indeed music that crosses borders with giant steps.

PORTUGAL/CUBA-Luis Represas, vocalist with the recently disbanded, top-selling Portuguese group Trovante, has recorded his debut solo album "Luis Represas" in Cuba. Confirming his reputation as one of the leading urban music vocalists, the album—released Nov. 4-contains a duet with top Cuban artist Pablo Milanes. A special videoclip was also taped in Cuba, and a Spanish-language version of the album has been recorded for the Latin American market. Now Represas, who is planning to perform in South America, has invited some of the Cuban musicians who played on the album to return with him to Portugal.

FERNANDO TENENTE

ROMANIA—Back here for an extended visit, 13 years after he emigrated from his homeland, Romulus Cruceanu is about to launch "Garden Of Silence" (Astralis), the album that was nominated for a Grammy in the New Age category (along with Tangerine Dream from Germany, Enya from Ireland, and Kitaro from Japan). It is most unusual for a Romanian musician to be so honored abroad, and the music community here, noting the favorable comments in publications such as Billboard and Melody Maker, has been duly impressed. Meanwhile, Cruceanu is spending his time immersing himself once again in the country's folklore, specifically to ensure that his next album will be even more steeped in the influences of Romanian archaic music . . . Another success for a Romanian musician abroad came when the young singer Carmen Trandafir from Bucharest triumphed at the Golden Orpheus festival competition in Bulgaria. Unfortunately, the organization of the festival left a lot to be desired; the orchestra refused to play, and Trandafir did not receive any of the several thousand dollars she was due in prize money. Her first single, comprising the two songs with which she won OCTAVIAN URSULESCU the competition, is to be released on Electrocord.
