Ibarģuen, still undefeated since 2012, took the lead for good with her second-round 14.80. She had needed that jump, as Israel's Ukrainian transferee Minenko leapt 14.78 three jumps earlier in that round. Ibarģuen made certain of the gold with 14.90 in the fourth. The only other jump of significance came in the last round, when Rypakova earned another medal in the event with 14.77. For Ibarģuen it was her 29th consecutive win with phases of 5.65, 4.14 and 5.11 (plus a board gap of 3.4cm).

A most heartwarming moment occurred in the final round when 34 year-old Fibingerová scored an unexpected victory over the highly favoured GDR putters. On paper, Slupianek was expected to add the first world title to her Olympic title and world record. In the event, she was struggling with a tendon injury and could not better her opening throw in the final (20.56). Instead her team-mate Knorscheidt went in front with 20.70 in the second round. Soviet throwers held third and fourth places until the last throw of the fifth round, when Fibingerová moved to fourth place with 20.30.

In the wet conditions, nobody could improve in the final round before Fibingerová entered the circle for the last throw of the contest. The Czech putter had a reputation for performing well in the rain and her last effort landed clearly beyond the yellow 21m line. Knowing she had won, she threw her arms in the air and raced out of the circle. Every official in range was then hugged by the emotional winner.

"A month ago, my father died," revealed Fibingerová after the medal ceremony. "I was very sad and still am. My mother is too. On my last attempt, I thought of my father and my mother. I picked up the yellow shot and said 'This is the shot of gold!' And so it was."

Lisovskaya – who had improved her own world record to 22.63 the previous June – was given a scare by Neimke. The 21 year-old GDR putter produced a personal best of 21.21 in the second round. Lisovskaya responded with 21.16 in the third but did not get in front until her 21.24 in the fifth.

Though her margin of victory was not particularly impressive, the Soviet putter must have been relieved to have won the gold. She had been the favourite at the previous year's European Championship but placed only ninth.

Asia won its first ever world outdoor athletics title when 26 year-old Huang Zhihong easily beat the defending champion Lisovskaya. The Soviet took the lead with her first put of 20.15, but she was immediately overtaken when the next woman – Huang – put 20.64. The Chinese woman went even further in the second round (20.83) to solidify her grip on Tokyo's first field event gold.

Lisovskaya was pushed back to third when Krivelyova produced 20.16 in the third, but the 1987 winner clinched the silver with 20.29 in the fifth.

"When I won I felt so elated I couldn't think of anything else," said the exuberant winner. "The Japanese people in the crowd really supported me and gave me strength."

Huang won with even more ease than in 1993. Olympic Champion Krivelyova went to the front with 19.97 in the first round. The Russian could throw no further, whereas Huang produced four 20m+ puts, just as she had in Tokyo. In third place throughout the contest was the 1987 runner-up, Neimke.

Like John Godina in the Gothenburg men's shot put final, Astrid Kumbernuss dominated from the start. Her opener of 20.52 would have been good enough to win as would all her valid puts.

Kumbernuss, sporting heavily strapped knees, produced a put in the third round which landed much further than the three arcs marked on the throwing sector. It was a personal best of 21.22 which gave her a lead of 1.18m from defending champion Huang. That is how it finished, with the widest winning margin ever at world or Olympic level. Mitkova took the bronze from Neimke in the final round.

Kumbernuss couldn't wait to avenge her 1997 World Indoor Championships defeat by Pavlysh, a result which terminated the German's 53-win streak. "Losing in Paris," she said, "lit the fire again inside me"; she "wanted to show who is boss in the ring." Following an opening foul by Pavlysh, Kumbernuss started purposefully with 20.59 to establish a lead she was never to lose ... although it was close. Pavlysh threw 20.57 in the second round and although Kumbernuss responded with 20.71 the Ukrainian was always a danger and finished only 5cm down with 20.66, a far cry from the German's 1.18m winning margin in 1995 over Huang Zhihong. The latter, champion in 1991 and 1993, finished fourth this time behind Storp, Kumbernuss's training partner, whose bronze medal winning distance of 19.22 would have netted her 12th place in the 1987 final.

Back in January 1999 when Kumbernuss, six months after giving birth to a son, was barely able to reach 12 metres with a standing put in training, it must have seemed like an unattainable dream ... but retain the world title she did. Early in the season she was consistently losing, but this athlete, who once went unbeaten in 53 contests, gradually rediscovered her strength and technical prowess. With 19.76 to her name she went to Seville second on the world list to World Indoor Champion Krivelyova (20.26). The return to big-time competition fired her up and in round 2 she took the lead with 19.34 and increased it with her next three throws to 19.59, 19.62 and 19.85. Team-mate Kleinert snatched second from Krivelyova with a fifth round personal best of 19.61.

Three-time winner Kumbernuss slumped to sixth place while Korolchik, a surprise Olympic Champion in 2000, was completely dominant. Her qualifying throw (19.87) alone was longer than anyone else could manage in the entire competition, and in the final she put 20.61 in the third. Kleinert-Schmitt, wearing black and red hair, repeated her 1999 silver. She let out a squeal of delight after her final put which landed at a personal best of 19.86.

The medal positions were unchanged after round 2 and the bronze went to Athens silver medalist Pavlysh.

Ostapchuk had the leading qualifying mark of 19.56 and went even further with 20.12 in round five of the final. By then the 34 year-old Russian was in a commanding lead at 20.63. The only other one over 20m was Pavlysh who took the bronze medal, just two places ahead of promising junior Adams. Former winner Kumbernuss failed to reach the final.

In five of the previous seven championships, the title had been won by more than half a metre. Ostapchuk, the only thrower to reach 20m ensured a similar win for herself with her opening throw in the final of 20.30. Of the finalists only Krivelyova (with a best of 21.06 from 1992) had ever thrown further, and only Cumbá, with 18.37, was within 2m at the end of round one. Ostapchuk had three other fair throws: 20.13, 20.23 and 20.51. Round three saw the other medals decided as Ryabinkina threw 19.64 two throws before Vili managed 19.62.

Krivelyova finished fifth, but all performances by her between August 2004 & 2006 were annulled when a re-test of the doping sample she had given at the 2004 Olympic Games proved positive. Then in March 2013, it was announced that a re-test of the samples taken in Helsinki had shown adverse findings for several athletes including Nadezhda Ostapchuk. She had in the meantime been stripped of a gold at the London Olympics because of a further infraction. The IAAF confirmed her punishment package in February 2014. She was banned for four years in 2012-2016 and all her results between Helsinki 2005 and August 14, 2007 were annulled. Ryabinkina became the rightful World Champion, from Vili and Kleinert.

The only athletes further than 20m prior to Osaka were Ostapchuk, Lammert and Vili. Ostapchuk scared herself in the qualifying, throwing 18.23 to become the 12th qualifier by a margin of just four centimetres. Buoyed up, the Belarusian opened the final with 20.04 to head Vili 19.89 and Lammert 19.33 at the end of round one.

Kleinent moved into bronze medal position in round two with 19.45, while Vili tried to make inroads into Ostapchuk's lead. Her 19.74 in round two was followed by 19.80 in the next round, and 19.95 in round five, while Kleinent made a further improvement to 19.77, also in the penultimate round. Li slipped by Lammert for fourth with 19.38 in the final round. The imposing (1.93/121Kg) Vili then produced a Commonwealth record of 20.54 to move into a big lead. Ostapchuk, showing great competitive instincts, reacted by putting her season's best of 20.48 to end a superb final round. It should be noted that, as reported for Helsinki 2005, the Belarusian had all results annulled for a period two years up to a fortnight before competing in Osaka.

Vili, the reigning World and Olympic Champion, was the prohibitive favourite, and duly led the qualifiers with 19.70. Notably, all those who advanced used the traditional "O'Brien" technique. In the final, Vili got off to a slow start with 19.40, which was exceeded in the opening round by Kleinent (20.06) equaling her lifetime best, Gong and Mikhnevich. The Chinese thrower improved to a personal best of 19.89 in round two. By her third throw Vili had also been overtaken by Avdeyeva (19.48), but she then launched the shot out to 20.25. Kleinent, clearly galvanized by the home crowd, improved her best to 20.20, and Vili responded with throws of 20.16, a winning 20.44, and another 20.25. Kleinent won her third silver medal in the event, while Vili would subsequently win the World Athletics Final with 21.07, her eleventh consecutive annual improvement.

The victory lap of the medalists (and also the heptathletes) was paused at the 300m point for the men's 100m final.

Between them Adams and Ostapchuk had won six of the 12 available medals since 2003, and had the top 11 marks of the season, so it was no surprise to find them on the podium again. Gong (19.64) and Camarena-Williams (19.63) led until the third round, when Adams (20.04), Ostapchuk (19.87) and Kolodko (a personal best of 19.78) all clicked. Ostapchuk went into silver medal position in the fifth with 20.05, then on the last throw of the competition Adams "smashed the crap out of the shot" and it landed

Adams came to Moscow with an unbeaten streak of 39, and the best five marks of the season. Her former arch rival Nadezhda Ostapchuk was absent, having failed two doping tests at the London Olympics and a further re-test of her sample from Helsinki 2005.

In the first round of the final, Carter opened with 19.92, then Adams took the lead with 20.41. The New Zealander claimed the title with her second round throw of 20.46, improving in the third to 20.88, her best of the day. Gong's second round 19.95 held the silver medal until the final round, when the ecstatic Schwanitz jumped up from fifth with a personal best 20.41. For Adams it was a fourth title in a row, making her the only woman to achieve that feat.

Gong and Schwanitz had met five times during 2015 before Beijing, with the German winning 3-2. Could Schwanitz prevent a home win on the first night of the championships? Gong opened the final with an excellent 20.30, and followed with 20.05 and 20.25. In the meantime, the German had improved from 20.00 to a winning 20.37 in round three. After five 20m throws between them in the first half of the competition, there was only one such mark in the second half – 20.10 by Schwanitz, though the German did touch the 20m with her final effort before deliberately fouling. Behind them, Carter earned her first outdoor global championship medal with 19.76 ahead of Márton's Hungarian record of 19.48. Four-time winner Valerie Adams was coming back after knee surgery and decided not to compete in Beijing.

A major shock was the failure of Galina Savinkova – the world record holder at 73.26 – to qualify for three further throws in the final. Just as the Soviet thrower was below her best form, so the GDR's Martina Opitz must have been inspired. Only her country's second-string thrower, she took the lead in round 2 and improved with three of her remaining throws. All of these were better than the best of the runner-up Murashova, who clinched the silver with her final throw.

Hellmann (née Opitz) became the first athlete to retain a world title. She did so emphatically: with the first throw of the final, she set a championship record of 71.08. This she improved to 71.62 in the fourth round. The only other 70m throw of the contest was by Gansky in the third.

The GDR filled three of the first four places, with world junior record holder Wyludda in fourth spot. World senior record holder Šilhavá placed sixth, just as she had in Helsinki.

The day after Carl Lewis's long jump defeat there was another shock when Ilke Wyludda – the winner of her previous 40 contests – was beaten. Not that the German performed badly. She threw season's bests in the fourth (69.00) and fifth rounds (69.12) to establish a commanding lead. Earlier in the final round, the pony-tailed Khristova had improved from seventh to third with 66.96, pushing defending champion Hellmann out of the medals.

The Bulgarian really clicked in round 6. Taking two turns, she propelled the discus clearly past the 70m line. To avoid defeat, the German needed to throw further than she had for the past 15 months. She waited until after the women's high jump ceremony to take her chance, but fell short of 70m and deliberately fouled.

"I had a certain degree of confidence I could win a medal, but I didn't expect such a long throw as 71 metres," said Khristova. "Wyludda must be surprised."

Khristova served a four-year doping suspension from 1993. Sadly, she died at age 46 in 2008 from lung cancer and bronchopneumonia.

For the third successive World Championships, the qualifying round was won by Ilke Wyludda. Sadly, the German had been hampered by injury all summer and had nothing left for the final, finishing 11th.

The ex-Romanian Costian took an early lead in the final with throws of 63.90 and 64.78. Later in the second round, Burova threw 67.40 and this proved to be the winning effort. In the third round, Min moved into second place, but was back to third in the next round when Costian improved to 65.36.

Zvereva completed the Belarus discus medal collection by adding gold to the silver and bronze taken by her compatriots in the men's contest one day earlier. The 34 year-old threw 68.64 in the first round to easily beat the 66.86 by defending champion Chernyavskaya (formerly Burova). Wyludda, the favourite, was beaten again. She stayed in third place until reaching 67.20 in the fifth round, so she did at least repeat her 1991 silver.

"I knew that I had only one chance – to throw the big one in the first round," said Zvereva. "I'm not sure I would have been the champ had I thrown my best in the second or third round."

Faumuina lived dangerously before winning New Zealand's first ever world title (or medal even). In the qualifying competition she faced a crisis after fouling her first two throws. She might have opted for a safety throw but there was no compromise as she registered a distance of 64.58. In the final the same thing happened. Two fouls left her facing extinction and she needed over 61m to survive the cut. No problem ... despite, or maybe because of, the pressure she threw 66.82, which not only ensured her three more trials but won her the title. She had come a long way since Gothenburg where she failed to reach the final, placing 28th of the 33 entrants with 54.32. Defending champion Zvereva and Olympic silver medalist Sadova were unable to improve upon their second round efforts of 65.90 and 65.14 for the other medals.

Sadova, the only thrower in the world to better 70m in 1999, will not look back on Seville with any pleasure. The 1997 bronze medallist only just scraped into the final in 12th place and eventually placed fourth. European Champion Dietzsch, who had not won a global medal since her silver in the 1986 World Junior Championships, dominated the contest. Her opener of 66.34 would have stood up as the winner had she not later improved to 67.60 and 68.14. After four rounds Sadova (64.98) was in second place but Grasu threw 65.35 in round 5 to supplant her, and a few minutes later the towering Kelesidou reached 66.05. Sadova was out of the medals.

Eleven years after becoming World Junior Champion in USSR colours, Sadova apparently became senior champion for the first time in her fourth World Championship final. Olympic Champion Zvereva, set the pace with a 65.78 qualifier then 67.10 in round 2 of the final. That held first place until the penultimate throw of the fourth round, when Sadova spun her implement out to 68.57, the world's longest throw of 2001. In the fifth round, Grasu overtook Kelesidou for the bronze.

Unfortunately, the winner failed a doping test for caffeine. The Russian Federation exonerated her and the case was to be referred to the Court of Arbitration for Sport, then in December 2002 the penalty was accepted by all parties. Zvereva, at 40 years 268 days old, therefore became the oldest ever World Champion or medallist.

At 37 years 298 days, Irina Yatchenko became the oldest female World Champion apart from her compatriot Zvereva. She did so with her first throw of 67.32 which remained the longest of the day though Kelesidou came close with 67.13 in the third then 67.14 in the sixth. Greece won the other medal thanks to Vóggoli, who threw a personal best of 66.73 in the fourth round. "I liked the circle a lot," said the winner, "as I prefer the surface hard and slow." At this point, Belarus had won all of the three throws finals staged so far in Paris.

Sadova and Dietzsch had both lost just twice in 2005, with Olympic Champion Sadova favoured to win in Helsinki. Cechlová and Song led the qualifiers. The final actually began on August 9 but was abandoned after two throws because of the terrible weather and then postponed for two days. Both Faumuina (62.73) and Sadova (64.33) produced their best throws in the opening round, but it was Dietzsch who achieved the best initial throw with 64.89. Cechlová moved into third in round two with 63.00 before cementing her position in with 63.19 in the fifth.

Only Dietzsch was able to get beyond 64m after the first round, and she did so in the wet conditions with all of her throws, enabling her to pass her last round. Dietzsch was competing in her eighth championships; she won in 1999 but had otherwise not been on the podium. Her unrestrained joy in winning was reminiscent of Helena Fibingerová's shot win in 1983, as she hugged as many officials as possible.

Dietzsch (39) headed the world list with 68.06, and endorsed her position as favourite on her record ninth appearance in the championships by leading the qualifying round with 65.17. The champion from 1999 and 2005 opened up in the final with 66.61, which she followed with 66.48. Neither mark was headed on the day, though Pishchalnikova did (like Dietzsch) produce three throws over 65m. No-one else could get over 64m, and Barrios's opening throw of 63.90 held up against Grasu, who achieved her best of 63.40 in the final round. Dietzsch had first competed internationally – for the GDR – in 1986, placing second in the World Junior championships. In winning, she became the first athlete to win the women's discus three times and the second-oldest World Champion after 2001 winner Ellina Zvereva.

The following summer, Pishchalnikova was found guilty of tampering or attempting to tamper with a doping control sample back in April 2007. As detailed in the report here of the Osaka women's 1500m, she was eventually banned from that date to April 30, 2011. So her Osaka silver went to Barrios, and Grasu won her third world medal.

Between them, Dietzsch, Zvereva and Yatchenko had more than 60 years of international experience, including the previous five world titles, but none of them qualified for the final though Dietzsch did make a record-equaling 10th appearance at the World Championships.

The qualifiers were led by the Chinese duo of Ma and Song. Barrios, the Olympic and World silver medalist, was the only thrower beyond 61m in the first round with a solid 64.44. Grasu, three times a medalist since 1999, went into the lead in the second round with 65.20, with another veteran – Sadova – moving into third with 61.78. Samuels (62.71) and Glanc (62.66) then overtook the Russian, and Samuels then improved her lifetime best (of 62.95) with 64.76 and a winning 65.44. Only Barrios could react, and she came very close with her 65.31 in the final round. So she repeated her silver from Osk 2007.

The Australian became the first discus thrower to win world golds in all three age categories, having been World Youth Champion in 2005 and World Junior Champion one year later.

In 2017 it was announced that Barrios had failed a re-test of a doping control sample from the 2008 Olympic Games, where she had originally won a silver medal. That award was withdrawn and she was given a one-year ban, plus a one-year results annulment to August 17, 2009 – just two days before she performed in Berlin.

Li (67.98) and Müller (66.99) were the world's leading throwers of 2011 prior to Daegu, and they duly led the qualifying round with 64.44 and 65.54 respectively. In the final, the Chinese was always one step ahead of the German, leading 65.28 to 65.06 in the opening round, and then improving to 66.52 ahead of Müller's 65.97 in round two. Barrios threw 65.73 in the third to win the bronze. Li's coach was Karl-Heinz Steinmetz, the German who had also advised the great multi-World Champion Lars Riedel.

Olympic Champion Perković was almost a prohibitive favourite as the only athlete to have thrown 68 metres in 2013, which she'd done four times. The Croatian could not have got closer to that distance in Moscow, with 67.99 in round two.

The silver medal was expected to be contested by Barrios and Müller, but Robert-Michon produced a surprise. In eight global championships her best had been a sixth place in the London Olympics (or fifth after Darya Pishchalnikova's disqualification was confirmed). In Moscow, she produced three throws good enough to win the silver medal, culminating in a French record of 66.28 in the final round.

Perković had beaten Caballero 7-0 before the championships, but in Beijing the tall and relatively slender Cuban (1.75m/73kg) was at a new level. She went out to 69.28 in the first round, ending the throw in a sitting position in the circle.

The Croat was sufficiently discombobulated that she was unable to launch a serious challenge until the last round, at which point she was languishing in fourth place. Perković then finally threw 67.39 for the silver, an effort she later described with a four-letter word. One of the biggest favourites in athletics had been defeated. Müller managed to hold onto the bronze medal with 65.63, withstanding the challenge of Pérez, who reached 65.46 in the last round.

As with the women's pole vault in Seville, this new event produced a splendid winning performance. No world record here but Melinte came close to her pending mark of 75.97 with a series which climaxed with 75.20, at the time the third longest ever throw. She thought that, but for the heat, she might have thrown one or two metres further. Kuzenkova, the event's previous trail blazer, smashed her first effort into the netting but worked her way through to a final round 72.56, the longest ever non-winning mark. There was a huge gap after them but it was encouraging for the small nations that the bronze should go to a native of American Samoa, the US-based Misipeka.

Last of the 21 competitors with her only valid throw of 50.38 was 16 year-old Skolimowska ... winner of the Olympic title a year later with 71.16!

Kuzenkova was the favourite and started well with 70.43 in qualifying then 70.61 in the first round of the final. She followed up with a 69.94, but she had no response when Moreno flung her hammer out to 70.65 in third round. In the meantime, Eagles had filled third place at 68.87.

Observers raved about Moreno's technique. The 20 year-old Cuban prepared before each throw by making four circles with her right index finger. In rounds 3, 4 and 5 Kuzenkova fouled and there were no changes in the medal positions. After her and the competition's final throw of 66.95, Moreno rushed toward the track to celebrate but was restrained from doing so as the women's 10,000m had reached its closing stages.

Moreno became the only athlete to retain a throws title from Edmonton, though she needed three attempts just to qualify for the final. Once there, the 22 year-old Cuban took an immediate lead at 71.02, then went on to dominate the contest with throws of 73.33 and 72.52. Kuzenkova scored a third successive silver. The crowd were greatly relieved that Montebrun moved from fifth to third in round four. Less satisfied was Gu, who became the first woman to throw 70m and not win a medal.

The medallists from Paris – Moreno, Kuzenkova and Montebrun – were again favoured to win the medals, though new world record holder Lysenko was clearly a contender. These four were the leading qualifiers.

The opening three rounds of the final were low-key, with Moreno (70.88) leading from Kuzenkova (70.70) and Lysenko (70.30). Montebrun – in sixth place at halfway – warmed things up by taking the lead with 71.41 in round four. In the next round the tall, athletic (1.86/81Kg) Lysenko reached 72.46, to be overtaken immediately by Kuzenkova (74.03) and Moreno (73.08). The Olympic Champion increased her lead over the double World Champion, throwing 75.10 in the last round, her best for five years, while Moreno responded with 73.04.

Almost eight years later, in March 2013, the winner was exposed as a drug cheat when it was announced that a re-analysis of her Helsinki doping control sample – using the most up-to-date analytical techniques – had revealed an adverse finding. Besides being suspended in 20013-2015, all her results for two years from August 2005 were disqualified, starting with those in Helsinki. Moreno therefore became a triple champion.

Seventy-seven metres had been beaten by Tatyana Lysenko four times by the end of June, but she was then suspended for a doping offence. This left Moreno and Skolimowska, both finalists on four previous occasions, as the fancied athletes. Surprisingly, the qualifying was led by Brkljačić, who reached 74.69, but she faded in the final, reaching only 68.16 for 11th place.

Moreno opened the final with 72.87, but was overtaken by Skolimowska's 73.75. Heidler then moved into the lead with 74.76, and Zhang moved past Moreno with 73.11. The Cuban eventually got going with 74.33 in round four, and Zhang reached 74.21 then 74.39 in the 5th round to take back second place. Moreno then entered the circle for the final time, proceeded with her pre-throw ritual, including the rotation of a finger in front of her face to help visualize the throw about to occur, and launched the ball and chain out to ... 74.74, missing gold by just 2cm. The event saw the first occasion of nine throwers exceeding 70m in any competition, and more than doubled the number that had managed that distance ever in the World Championships.

Heidler and Włodarczyk led the qualifiers, and similarly led the final with 75.10 and 74.86 respectively after the first round. Włodarczyk then hurled the implement 77.96 for a new world record. So excited was the Pole, that in celebrating her throw she damaged her ankle so badly that she was unable to throw further, and would subsequently require surgery. Showing great competitive fire, Heidler improved in round two to 75.38, then 75.73, 76.44 (fifth round) and finally a national record 77.12. Klaas also set a personal best with 74.23, and occupied third place until Hrašnová's fifth round 74.79. No competition had seen as many as 10 over 70m before – here 12 exceeded that limit in the qualifying, with 11 doing so in the final.

Heidler had been the only woman to have set a world record in a world championship event in 2011, with her 79.42 in May. Three other marks ahead of her nearest rival made her a big favourite. Zhang was the early leader with 75.03, until Lysenko produced a seasonal best of 76.80 to start her campaign. This was followed by efforts of 77.09 and 77.13, all three efforts being championship records. Heidler was stuck in bronze medal position with efforts of 73.96 and 74.70, before reaching 76.06 in the fifth, but the day belonged to the tall (1.80m) Lysenko. "I thought 77 metres would for sure be enough for a medal," she reflected, "but not enough for the win."

The qualifying round produced one of the shocks of the championship when world record holder Heidler, a medallist at the three previous championships, was eliminated. Olympic Champion Lysenko led the final from the start until the third round when Włodarczyk threw 77.79. Lysenko reacted in the next round with a Russian record 78.80, the second-best ever. On the very next throw, Włodarczyk showed her competitive ability with 78.46, a national record and good for fourth on the all-time list.

Of all the field events in Moscow, this one, with performances so close to the world record, was the most qualitative. Though it should be remembered that Bulgakova, originally fifth, was disqualified after a re-test of doping control sample revealed a prohibited substance.

At the beginning of August Włodarczyk had become the first woman to throw over 80m with 81.08, and she was strongly favoured to regain the title she had won in 2009. The Pole led after the first round with a safe 74.40, and established her class with successive throws of 78.52, 80.27, a winning 80.85, and 79.31. Both 80m efforts were championship records and all those throws were well beyond the best of silver medalist Zhang, who reached a seasonal best of 76.33. The 2007 champion Heidler was regarded as a likely medalist, but had a poor day, with the bronze being taken by Tavernier's 74.02, just ahead of Hitchon's national record 73.86. Afterwards Włodarczyk commented "I must admit I feel a bit disappointed, because I really hoped for the world record here".

The capacity crowd of 54,700 had high expectations of the Finnish world record holder Lillak, who led the qualifying round at 69.16. Whitbread, meanwhile, had only just recovered from tonsillitis and scraped into the final in 12th place.

One brilliant throw from each of these two women provided a final of high drama. The first of these came in the opening round, when Whitbread went near to her personal best with 69.14. Lillak threw 67.34, while another Briton, Sanderson, went into third at 64.76.

Three full rounds followed with none of the principals improving. It became increasingly clear that Whitbread's opening effort was not only an excellent throw in the conditions, but that it might hold up for victory. In the fifth round, Verouli replaced Sanderson in third place. Lillak improved marginally to 67.46 so was left with just one more chance.

Whitbread passed her final throw with a sore back and could barely watch as Lillak prepared for her final effort. The crowd was deafening as the spear left her hand, then went berserk when it landed at 70.82. Sanderson was still to throw but Lillak sprinted round a victory half-lap. The Briton managed only 59.74 and Finland's first gold was confirmed. "Not technically perfect," said Lillak of her winning throw, "but there was enough force behind it to go over 70m."

In Helsinki, Whitbread led for most of the contest before being overtaken in the final round. Four years later, the tables were turned when Whitbread was the one chasing the 71.76 second-round throw of Felke. The Briton, whose participation in the championships had been in doubt because of a shoulder injury, came close with 71.34 in the third round.

Whitbread finally got it right in the fourth round with the third best throw of all-time, 73.16. Felke, the world record holder, was next to throw and fouled. In the fifth round, Whitbread improved again to 76.64.

Eight days after winning the first of the Tokyo throws, China unexpectedly won the last. Xu Demei chose the best possible time to throw a personal best of 68.78: the first round of the final. Meier-Felke – the Rome silver medalist – threatened with 68.68 in the second round, but these two proved to be the only 68m+ efforts of the day.

The bronze medal also went to Germany but there was huge disappointment for the other German Forkel. She won the qualifying round with 68.14 then could only manage 57.90 in the final.

She had failed several times before at major championships, but in Stuttgart Hattestad did everything right. She led the qualifiers and with the first throw of the final went into a big lead with 69.18.

The Norwegian's big rival, Natalya Shikolenko, followed up her 65.64 opener with three fouls. This allowed Forkel to claim the silver. Like Hattestad, the German therefore made amends for a miserable performance at the previous World Championships.

Natalya Shikolenko held on for the bronze one place ahead of her younger sister, Tatyana, who set a personal best in the final round.

Defending champion Trine Hattestad was throwing well in 1995 but by the time of Gothenburg was five months pregnant and did not compete for obvious reasons. This left Shikolenko as the favourite to add gold to her 1993 bronze, and she did just that. She had the best qualifying effort (65.46) and took the lead in the final with her first throw of 66.48. No-one could approach that, though the Belarus thrower did go better with 67.56 in the final round. The woman who was beaten in the last round at the Barcelona Olympics then waited anxiously for the three remaining finalists to close their accounts.

In a year which caused so much grief to Albanians there was a result from Seville which might have brought those people some pride and pleasure. Manjani no longer competed for Albania; now married to Greek weightlifter George Tzellis she became a Greek citizen in 1997, but she made history by becoming the first Albanian-born athlete ever to win a world athletics title. Title holder Hattestad was delighted to take the lead in round 2 with 66.06 but later in the round Tzellii went ahead with 66.33 and with her next throw she improved to a Greek record with the new implement of 67.09. Tatyana Shikolenko later produced a Russian record of 66.37 to push Hattestad down to third; her elder sister Natalya won this title for Belarus in 1995. European Champion Damaske was unable through injury to throw in the qualifying round.

Stone, a London-born Australian policewoman, created a stir by leading the qualifiers with a personal best of 67.72 and proved that was no fluke by pressuring the favourite, Hattestad, throughout the final. The Norwegian, champion in 1993 and pregnant at the time of the 1995 Championships, opened strongly with 68.78 and that proved to be the winner but Stone drew uncomfortably close in the second round with 68.16 and her last two throws landed at 68.64 and 68.60. The bronze medalist Damaske excelled also, throwing a personal best of 67.12 in the final round, but Olympic Champion Rantanen suffered an off-day in tenth place. "I was given strength by the knowledge that my two sons were watching from the stands," said Hattestad.

The previous July, Menéndez had become the first Cuban woman to set a world record with a throw of 71.54. She didn't need to throw that far in Edmonton, but still won easily. The 21 year-old did the damage in the first three rounds with efforts of 66.56, 69.42 and 69.53.

Tzellii defended her title with honour, lying second throughout and achieving her best of 65.78 in round 5. Another Cuban, Bisset, was in third place throughout the contest ahead of Tomečková who could not reproduce her 65.71 qualifier when it mattered.

The 1999 winner Manjani (now divorced from Giorgos Tzelilis) again demonstrated her ability to peak for major championships. Before Paris her season's best was just 63.13. Her opening four throws in the final were better than that or anything else the opposition could produce. Her fourth effort of 66.52 was a 2003 world best, but it was also the shortest winning throw in world championships history. The silver medallist Tatyana Shikolenko was another to repeat her placing from Seville 1999.

At the ripe old age of 25, Menéndez was competing in her fifth World championships, aiming to regain the title she had won in her world record year of 2001. After throwing 65.77 in the qualifying round, trailing the personal best 66.52 of veteran Nerius, Menéndez set up for her first throw drawn at the end of the opening round. Again trailing Nerius, who led with 65.96, the powerful (1.78/80Kg) Cuban launched a throw which had the knowledgeable Finnish crowd buzzing with expectation before the spear landed. It was measured at 71.70, a new world record; normally such a throw kills off the opposition, but on this occasion it engendered a magnificent reaction. Obergföll, with a lifetime best of 64.59 hit a perfect throw, and was rewarded with a European record 70.03. She later said "I cannot explain what happened today." Nerius's throw held up for the bronze medal, while Helsinki held its reputation as the spiritual home of javelin throwing as the top five throwers came away with lifetime bests.

In the absence of Helsinki winner Menéndez (injured) Obergföll was a strong favourite, having produced the top seven throws of 2007. The German was less than impressive in the qualifying, managing 60.77, while the qualifiers were led by the Czech duo of Brejchová and Špotáková. The latter was just warming up, as she opened in the final with a Czech record of 66.40. Obergföll reacted well, finishing off round one with 64.01, before improving to 65.26 in the next round. At this point no-one else had managed to reach 62m, which Brejchová rectified with her third round 63.73, inspired perhaps by Špotáková's further improvement to 67.07. Nerius, in her sixth final, produced her first 60m throw of the competition in round four – 64.42 – which would prove enough to secure her third world championship medal. Her teammate Obergföll saved her best till last, coming within a metre of Špotáková with 66.46. The Czech was a worthy winner, and averaged an excellent 64.37 with her six throws.

No javelin thrower in World Championship history had ever produced a qualifying round throw beyond the winning distance in the final by another thrower, but that unenviable feat was managed in Berlin by Abakumova who qualified with 68.92, the best throw of 2009.

The final began with Stoian improving her best by 2½m with 64.51, and then Nerius – at her eighth World Championship – produced the second best throw of her career, 67.30. Olympic Champion Špotáková immediately reacted with 64.94 and improved in the third round to 66.42, but could get no closer, while Abakumova overtook Stoian for bronze in round three before reaching 66.06 in the sixth. Nerius had won bronze in the three previous championships and later said she would not reconsider her decision to retire that September. Why? “Just because everything that will come now can only be less good.”

Obergföll, who led the qualifiers with 68.76, and Špotáková were the athletes most highly regarded. The Czech opened with 68.80 to confirm the opinion of the experts, and then the fireworks started. Abakumova followed Špotáková's second round 67.90 with an arrow of a throw which landed at 71.25. Wonderfully consistent, the Czech star then threw 68.64 and 67.12. Behind the big two Viljoen's 65.20 in round two was overtaken by Obergföll's fourth of 65.24. In a wonderful sequence of throws in the fifth, Viljoen threw an African record 68.38, Špotáková went out to 71.58, and then Abakumova again improved her national record with 71.99. After the competition, the effervescent Russian happily showed the strapping covering an injury on her right heel which had threatened to prevent her from competing.

“It's a mystery to me why the javelin went so far and floated so high,” she explained. “The air seemed to catch it and it went on and on.”

In 2016 the IOC announced that Abakumova was to be stripped of the Olympic silver medal she won in 2008, after a re-test of her doping sample from those Games found traces of the prohibited substance turinabol. Her appeal against that decision was still active as at June 30, 2017.

On six occasions between 2005 and 2012, Obergföll won medals at Olympic, World and European Championships, but never the gold. The 31 year-old German was co-favourite with reigning champion Abakumova. The Russian led after the first round of the final with 65.09. In the second round, Mickle improved her personal best from her qualifying mark of 65.73 to 66.25. Obergföll, throwing last then reached 69.05 to win the gold medal. None of the top eight improved in the second half, except for Mickle who reached 66.60 with the last throw. “Finally a champion,” Obergföll said afterwards “in the year where I didn't really expect it, it finally happened”, and a month later she married her coach, the 1995 and 2003 bronze medallist, Boris Henry. The couple agreed that he would take her name if she won in Moscow, so they became Herr und Frau Obergföll.

Abakumova's husband Dmitriy Tarabin also became a World Championship javelin bronze medallist, one day later in Moscow.

Historically, the javelin has been the throwing event with the most uncertainty, and this was the case in Beijing. Špotáková, the world record holder and double Olympic Champion (though never a world champion), threw 65.02 to qualify, but managed only 60.08 in the final to place ninth.

Lu led the competition until midway through the third round with 64.72, ahead of Obergföll's 64.61 and Li's opener of 64.10. Molitor then edged temporarily into the lead with 64.74. The powerfully-built Viljoen briefly took over in round four with 65.79, and Lu responded well in the penultimate round with an Asian record 66.13. Could Molitor break Chinese hearts with the last throw of the contest? Yes, she threw a lifetime best of 67.69 to take gold. In all, the lead changed seven times during the competition.

"I cannot really believe this," said the new champion. "After my fifth throw, I thought: 'Maybe I can still improve a little bit.' I dreamed about that and now I have this new PB and world lead! Perfect!"

World record holder Ramona Neubert had never been beaten in an heptathlon. She not only maintained that record but led her country to a sweep of the medals.

Paetz, who had pushed Neubert in the previous year's European Championships, took an initial lead with a 13.11 100m hurdles. She was overtaken by Britain's Judy Livermore, who high jumped 1.92 but was to fall back thereafter and drop out after three fouls in the javelin throw.

Neubert was as low as seventh after the high jump, but her 23.27 200m not only gave her an overnight lead of 43 points, but also put her 29 points ahead of world record schedule.

The second day saw Neubert lose contact with her world record pace but stay comfortably ahead of Paetz. The third GDR athlete, Vater, consolidated her hold on the bronze medal with a win in the final event.

None of the Rome world champions was more dominant than Joyner-Kerse in the Heptathlon. The world record holder started in style with a fast win in the 100m hurdles. After personal bests in the high jump and shot put, she was 121 points ahead of world record schedule. An excellent 200m of 22.95 – just a tenth slower than her best – left her with a world best first day score of 4256. Second at this point was Nikitina on 3918.

JJK maintained a brilliant standard with a 7.14 long jump, breaking the championship record for that event. The heat took its toll in the final two events. The American was below her best in the javelin and clocked only 2:16.29 in the final event to miss a world record by 2.2 seconds. She nonetheless won from Nikitina by 564 points. The Russian had secured the silver with a personal best in the javelin.

There was more good news for the USA as the bronze went to 35 year-old Jane Frederick, a veteran of the 1972 Olympic Games.

Joyner-Kerse showed no reaction to her ankle twist in the previous night's long jump final when she won her 100m hurdles heat. She performed well in the high jump and shot, and was just 11 points below her world record schedule at the start of the 200m before disaster struck. At the crown of the bend the American dramatically pulled up with a hamstring injury. Her husband and coach Bobby later concluded that this had been triggered by the sore ankle.

The overnight leader was Zhu, but she was soon overtaken when Braun lunged a windy 6.67 on the second day. The German went further ahead of her immediate rivals with a fair javelin throw and had a comfortable 245-point margin before the final event. The 800m was won in spectacular fashion by Belova (née Nikitina), who improved four places and snatched the bronze medal.

Though not nearly as dominant as in her previous Olympic or World triumphs, Joyner-Kersey claimed her fourth individual world championship gold, the most ever by a woman.

The American had a good start in the hurdles but lost ground by high jumping only 1.81. Her rival, defending champion Braun, won the event at 1.90 and went into the lead. The German went further ahead after the shot. Joyner-Kersey then ran a strong 200m to take a narrow lead from Buraga and Braun after the first day.

Despite asthma attacks, the world record holder kept her momentum next morning with a 7.04 long jump. Braun managed 6.54 then was controversially given a red flag for a jump of a similar distance. A video replay of the jump appeared to show the German's foot plant safely behind the plasticine.

A fine javelin throw by the German left her with a seven-point advantage at the start of the 800m. This represented about half a second. In an exciting race, Braun managed to stay near to Joyner-Kersey until the last 300m, when the American sprinted clear.

"It was her greatest victory ever," commented Joyner-Kersey's husband and coach Bobby. "To come out of that tunnel, seven points behind, and win was one of the greatest moments of her career."

The build-up to this event centred around a fascinating clash between defending champion Jackie Joyner-Kersey and Heike Drechsler, who had the world's highest heptathlon score in 1994. Neither finished the event. JJK withdrew after her moderate showing in the long jump final and Drechsler pulled out after the shot put because of a worsening spike wound she sustained in the high jump.

That event also saw the end of the bid of the 1991 champion Braun, who injured her hand when it hit an upright while she was jumping.

The high jump, by contrast, was a good event for Shouaa, who set a national record of 1.86 and improved from 24th to 5th place as a result. The Syrian, who led the 1995 world rankings after winning at the important Götzis meeting, improved further to second place overnight, 91 points behind Moskalets.

The Russian fought back with a brilliant showing in the the following day's long jump. After a foul and 6.04, she spanned 6.70 to increase her lead. The javelin, however, changed everything because the Syrian threw almost 14m further than Moskalets and so gained a lead of 48 points. Moskalets tried to cancel this advantage in their 800m heat, but Shouaa covered her break and strode past to win the race.

This was Syria's first world medal. The country's previous best showing in these championships was 24th by Shouaa herself in the 1991 heptathlon; she failed to finish in 1993.

With the incomparable JJK confining herself to the long jump and Shouaa unable to defend because of a severe back injury, the 1991 champion Braun – contesting her 50th heptathlon – seized the opportunity of one last major title at the age of 32. The woman destined to succeed her as European champion, Lewis, was held at bay throughout. Braun opened with a snappy 13.16 to win the hurdles and followed up with a season's best high jump, a personal best shot put and a moderate 200m to lead overnight with 4009 to 3938 by Sazanovich, 3919 by Nazarovičienė and 3888 by Lewis.

Lewis moved into second place after the long jump and made further inroads in the javelin, the six-event scores being 5879 for Braun and 5797 for Lewis. The Briton would have had to finish some six seconds clear of Braun in the 800m to snatch the title, which was not a realistic target. In fact Braun overtook her in the last few strides to win by 85 points with 6739. Nazarovičienė maintained third place throughout the second day.

It was a shock to some that immediately after setting a French long jump record of 7.01 the former Sierra Leone athlete Barber (who had achieved six personal bests to place fourth in the 1995 World Championships heptathlon) opted to concentrate on the all-round test in Seville, but clearly she knew what she was doing. Except for the shot, she had no weaknesses and her first two events produced sensational personal bests: 12.89 hurdles into a slight wind and a 6cm improvement in the high jump to 1.93. She opened up a 185-point lead over Lewis who had a disastrous hurdles but recovered well with her highest ever jump of 1.87. However, the shot brought a dramatic turnabout for while Barber managed only 12.37 Lewis set a lifetime best of 16.12 to give her a 65-point margin. Barber, much faster over 200m, ended the day just one point clear, 3994-3993, with defending champion Braun on 3845 and Shouaa – contesting her first heptathlon since winning the 1996 Olympic title – on 3808.

Barber naturally piled up the points in the long jump (6.86) while Lewis was in big trouble until a final effort of 6.64. At first the jump was ruled a foul, but an appeal was eventually successful and Lewis was only 73 points behind. A good javelin throw would have regained the lead for Lewis but she managed only 47.44 to Barber's 49.88 and the lead increased to 120 points. Following the 800m Barber ended up 137 clear with a French record of 6861 and 7th place on the world all-time list. Lewis missed her Commonwealth record of 6736 by just 12 points. Far behind, Shouaa snatched the bronze from Braun by a 3-point margin.

Heptathlon fans endured some disappointment in Edmonton, first with the scratching of Olympic Champion Denise Lewis then with the failure to finish of reigning World Champion Eunice Barber. Lewis withdrew on the eve of the event with a stomach disorder. Barber had a dream start to the contest with a 12.78 hurdles, one of the quickest heptathlon times ever. She followed up with a good 1.88 high jump and then, disaster. The Frenchwoman, now coached by Bobby Kersee, fouled three times in the shot put. Her final attempt went close to the 14m line, but she overbalanced and touched the ground in front of the ring with her hand.

The event then developed into a duel between Sazanovich and Prokhorova, who had improved her high jump best by 5cm. Sazanovich's 15.90 shot made her the post-Barber leader. The wind gauge malfunction on August 4 meant that none of heptathlon scores could count as records because there was no wind reading on the 200m races. However, Burrell's 22.92 moved her up from 10th to fourth on the first day behind Sazanovich, Prokhorova and Roshchupkina.

Prokhorova closed on the leader with a 6.61 long jump, and Burrell moved into third place with her personal best of 6.45. In the javelin Sazanovich threw a personal best of 46.72, but all her advantage vanished when Prokhorova produced successive pbs of 47.12, 50.57 and 50.73. As the Russian was a strong 800m runner and Sazanovich was not, Prokhorova could afford to stroll around the 800m in 2:11.53 to guarantee the gold. For the bronze, Burrell needed to stay near to Roshchupkina. She finished ahead of the Russian and so the medal order was clear before the final scores were confirmed.

The charismatic Klūft delighted everyone even though she was to deny France a gold medal in Paris. The Frenchwoman won the 100m hurdles from the Swede 13.05 to 13.18. That time was the first of five personal bests by Klūft. The next came with a spectacular high jump of 1.94. The 20-year-old Swede then went very near to 1.95 and was now 19 points ahead of Barber who herself jumped an excellent 1.91.

In the shot Klūft set an outdoor pb (14.19) while Barber did enough to remain in second spot. The event winner was Sazanovich, who moved up from eighth to third. This top three would remain the same for the rest of the contest. For the 200m, Klūft was ideally drawn inside Barber and she smashed her pb with 22.98. She ended the day on 4143, the second best ever first day score. Barber was 204 points adrift.

There was drama in the long jump because while Barber opened with 6.61, Klūft fouled both her first two jumps, each at around 6.80. Another foul and the Swede would put herself out of the contest. Happily for her she spanned 6.68 despite taking off about 20cm behind the foul line. Klūft's javelin of 49.90 was displayed as a personal best but she had actually thrown 50.24 one month earlier. However, she gained further ground on Barber. The Swede needed to run 2:12.21 for 7000 points; she managed 2:12.12 for 7001 and third on the world all-time list. Uniquely, she became the reigning World, World Indoor and World Junior Champion.

Olympic and World Champion Klūft was suffering an ankle injury, while her principle rival Barber was, for once, injury-free. Barber took an expected lead in the opening event, scoring 1133 with her 12.94 into a slight wind (-0.4) while Klūft ran 13.19 (1096). Barber, an excellent high jumper, cleared 1.91, while Klūft, a 1.94 jumper, was restricted to 1.82.

The Swede reacted by throwing a lifetime best in the shot with 15.02, while Barber managed 13.20, which reduced the deficit from 153 points to 32. Skujytė, the biggest competitor (1.88/75Kg), led the shot with an excellent 16.61. Curiously Barber and Klūft were seeded in separate races in the 200m, with Barber running 24.01 (-1.0) while Klūft had to deal with a 2.5 headwind when clocking 23.70. Barber now led by two points with 3973, with Sotherton in third after a good 23.94 in the 200m. In the long jump Barber leapt an excellent 6.75, but Klūft reached 6.87. Barber fought back in the javelin, overtaking Klūft's 47.20 with her last throw of 48.24 to leave the margin at just 18 points. Simpson, the smallest competitor at 1.62/53Kg threw a stunning Ghanaian record of 56.36 to move from 10th to third.

Barber led Klūft in the 800m until the last 100m, when the Swede got free to edge her 2:08.89 to 2:11.94 and by 63 points in total, with Simpson holding off Skujytė and Sotherton for third. A French protest at Klūft's first round long jump, which certainly looked to be over the board, was denied, but Klūft's second best jump of 6.75, worth 40 points less, would still have got her home the winner. Barber in her seventh world heptathlon appearance won her third medal, with the top two repeating the same positions from Paris and Klūft producing a championship best day two score of 2916.

With 18 consecutive wins in the event, Klüft was a consensus choice with the “experts” to win the world title. Though behind Ennis after the first event, she equalled her best of 13.15, and she set a personal and World Championship heptathlon high jump best of 1.95. Her first day score of 4162 was almost 150 points ahead of Blonska (4014), with Sotherton (3989) just ahead of Ennis (3942).

Klüft reached a fine 6.85 in the long jump, losing 10 points to Blonska’s 6.88, and a 47.98 javelin saw her with more than 6100 points with one event to go. A solid 2:12.58 enabled her to break the European record of 7007, which had stood since 1989, by 25 points. Behind her Blonska was a clear second with 6832, while Sotherton, who needed to beat Skujytė by three seconds to win the bronze, did so by 12 seconds, and held off teammate Ennis by 41 points with 6510. Klüft’s lifetime best gave her an unprecedented third consecutive world title, while still only 24 years old.

Ennis, world leader with 6587, quickly put her stamp on the competition with a run of 12.93 in the hurdles, to take a lead of 76 points over Djimou’s 13.44. This was the closest that anyone would get to the 24 year-old Briton. Despite measuring only 1.64, Ennis won the high jump, clearing 1.92. Olympic Champion Dobrynska won the shot with 15.82 to move into second spot (5932), as Ennis produced her one personal best of the competition – 14.14 – to keep the lead at 138. Ennis was again best in the 200 with 23.25, and led Dobrynska overnight by 307 points, with Oeser (3814) leading a cast of five within 60 points of the Ukrainian.

Chudzik had the best long jump with 6.55, as Oeser (6.42) and Dobrynska (6.41) both jumped further than Ennis (6.29). Chudzik moved into second (5628) with a javelin throw of 48.72, 37 points ahead of Oeser, while Ennis’s 43.54 kept her 171 points ahead. Oeser pleased the crowd by beating Chudzik 2:14.34 to 2:18.58, overtaking the Pole for the silver medal with a personal best 6493, while Ennis beat them both with 2:12.22 to win by 238 points in a lifetime best of 6731.

On February 2, 2015 the IAAF announced that eighth-placed “Tatyana Chernova tested positive as a result of a re-analysis ordered by the IAAF of her sample collected at the 2009 IAAF World Championships in Berlin.” This case – and others involving Chernova – are still under appeal or review as at May 31, 2017.

The rankings prior to Daegu were headed by World and European champion Ennis with 6790, but Chernova was close behind with 6773. The Briton had run 12.79 for the 100m hurdles three weeks earlier, so 12.94 by her in Daegu was a slight disappointment. The leader after the hurdles, Fountain, followed her 12.93 with 1.89 to win her and the second event. Ennis and Chernova managed 1.86 and 1.83 respectively. After a personal best 14.67 in the shot, Ennis moved into the lead, then consolidated her position with a win in the 200m. She finished the day with 4078 points, but that was "only" 151 ahead of Chernova who was able to eat up that advantage in the javelin alone.

The tall (1.89m) Russian pulled back only 13 points in the long jump, but then produced a seasonal best 52.95 in the javelin, while Ennis had a poor 39.95 (after a warm-up throw of 45m). Chernova was suddenly 133 points ahead, which represented an unbreachable gap of nine seconds in the 800m. Ennis ran from the front in the last event, but ended up just 0.23 ahead of the Russian, so Chernova won by 129 points. The Russian's mother Lyudmila Chernova (née Zenina) won a squad gold medal at 4x400m in the 1980 Olympics.

In February 2015, the IAAF revealed that Chernova tested positive as a result of a re-analysis of her sample collected at Berlin 2009, where she placed eighth. The Russian Anti-Doping Agency banned her for two years and annulled her Berlin result and some others, but not her performance from Daegu 2011. The IAAF appealed the "selective" nature of that punishment and in November 2016, the Court of Arbitration for Sport ruled that all results achieved by Chernova between August 15, 2011 and July 22, 2013 were to be annulled.

That decision also came under an appeal which was still active as at June 30, 2017. Therefore, all Chernova's results and placings still stand for the purposes of this book. It should be further noted that in April 2017, the IOC reported that "re-analysis of Chernova's samples from Beijing 2008 resulted in a positive test for the prohibited substance dehydrochloromethyltestosterone (turinabol)." The bronze medal she won at those Games was withdrawn, but that decision is also under appeal at the time this book was being finalized.

Theisen-Eaton – the new wife of world decathlon record holder Ashton Eaton – led after the first event ahead of Melnychenko and Schippers. Melnychenko went into first place after the high jump, though the star of that event was Belgian Thiam who leapt 1.92 to rise from 28th to third. The Ukrainian led by 75 points overnight with 3912. This was despite losing 102 points to Schippers in the 200m with 23.87 as compared to the Dutchwoman's superb 22.84, which moved her into second spot.

On day two, Rath climbed from seventh to fourth with her 6.67 long jump, while Melnychenko increased her lead to 120 points, jumping 6.49 ahead of Schippers 6.35. Theisen-Eaton's javelin mark of 45.64 gained 73 points on Melnychenko, leaving the Canadian 68 behind but safely ahead of Schippers.

Theisen-Eaton needed to beat Melnychenko by about five seconds in the 800m to take the gold, but the Ukrainian stayed within a second as both set personal bests to confirm their gold and silver. Further up the field in the same heat Rath won in 2:06.43 which would have got her bronze, had Schippers not slashed her speed for the distance from 2:15.52 to 2:08.62.

Absent was reigning Champion Tatyana Chernova, who in July 2013 had won the World Student Games with a world-leading score of 6623 before apparently suffering a knee injury while competing in the individual 100m hurdles at the Russian Championships. As noted in the report for Daegu 2011, the IAAF later revealed that a re-test of her doping sample from Berlin 2009 had shown a positive result. Her case is under review as at June 30, 2015.

Returning from maternity, the former champion Ennis-Hill showed her competitive spirit on the first day, edging world leader Theisen-Eaton in every event. Her biggest rival appeared to be her compatriot Johnson-Thompson who went from ninth to second with her win in the 200m. Overnight, the leading standings were Ennis-Hill (4005), Johnson-Thompson (3925), Visser (3871) and Theisen-Eaton (3865).

Two of those contenders fell away in the long jump. Visser managed only 6.14, while Johnson-Thompson suffered the calamity of three no-jumps. With a best of 6.93 she had been quite capable of overtaking Ennis-Hill but in Beijing was successively over the board by margins of 5.1cm, 6.2cm and (for a jump estimated to be 6.82), a galling 1mm!

Ennis-Hill managed respectable efforts in both the long jump and javelin to hold an impregnable lead by 86 points or 5.5 seconds before the 800m. Javelin throws in the 53s lifted Broersen and Ikauniece-Admidina to second and fourth respectively and meant that pair would run for the bronze medal. Ennis-Hill and Theisen-Eaton were better 800m runners and the Canadian proved that with her quick pace in the final heat (30.11, 62.83, 1:36.31). Ennis-Hill came through to win that race and a second world title – or possibly her third, if Tatyana Chernova's disqualification from 2011 is ever confirmed.

Irina Strakhova coped best with the 86% humidity to take the first ever championship walking gold medal at this level. The 28 year-old Soviet raced conservatively, clocking 23:21 for the first half before coming home in 20:51. Even so, she was being led by Guan Ping, who was subsequently disqualified outside the stadium. The silver went to Saxby, who was in front at halfway in 22:32.

Several walkers collapsed close to the finish, victims of the difficult conditions.

The first of Stuttgart's golds, and the first of the Mercedes car prizes, went to a 26 year-old Finn who was walking in her third world championship. Nineteenth in 1987, third in 1991, Sari Essayah took the lead at around 7Km following the disqualification of Svensson, the 1991 silver medalist. The Finn speeded up thereafter, and started lapping the field. The second half of the race took her just 21:05. It was no surprise to see the experienced Salvador take a silver, but Granados was an unexpected bronze medalist in a new Spanish record.

At 18 years 135 days, Stankina replaced Ismael Kirui as the youngest ever world champion of the time. She beat a strong field which produced the quickest times ever for places between third and fifteenth. Twelve walkers were in contention at halfway with Perrone forcing the pace (21:21 at 5Km).

The drama started in the final 2Km when Perrone, Stankina and World Cup winner Gao moved clear. Gao was abruptly disqualified outside the stadium, leaving Stankina to win from Perrone and Nikolayeva, who suddenly and controversially caught the defending champion Essayah in the final two strides of the race.

For the first and last time the women's walk was contested in these championships as a 10,000m track event; from 1999 it would be 20Km on the road. Sidoti, the 1990 European champion who only came into the Italian team as a reserve, became the smallest of all world champions (she is just 1.50m or 4ft 11in tall) as she led from the second kilometre onwards for victory in 42:55.49 ... somewhat quicker than the 45:02.8 which won the last men's Olympic race at this distance on the track in 1952! Sidoti covered the first half in 21:23.72, the second in 21:31.77. Defending champion Stankina, the only opponent to stay close to Sidoti after halfway, was disqualified at 8Km. Her Russian colleagues had a disastrous time also: Ivanova, who crossed the line in second place, was later stripped of her medal and banned for two years after testing positive for Stanazolol, and Olympic Champion Nikolayeva placed no higher than ninth.

China's only medals of the championships came here as Liu Hongyu and Wang Yan entered the stadium well clear of the rest and just two strides apart. Covering the final 5 kilometres in a vicious 22:11, Liu (24) won the inaugural world title at this distance. She had already won the World Cup race earlier in the year in 1:27:32, just 2 sec outside the world record she shared. Wang, who became the youngest ever world record breaker when setting 5000m figures in 1986, aged 14, added a silver to her Olympic bronze of 1996.

The bronze went to a real veteran in 38 year-old Junna-Saxby, 12 years after taking silver; although she thought she was fourth when she finished. Fedoskina, who set a world junior best of 1:27:35 for second in the World Cup, was disqualified when in third place just seven minutes from the finish, while defending champion Sidoti was a non-finisher due to stomach trouble.

Ivanova, disqualified after winning silver in 1997, climbed to the top of the walking tree in 2001 with a world best of 1:24:50 before winning in Edmonton. Winning by more than one minute was testimony to the high disqualification rate; a third of the starters were re-carded, though Ivanova herself never received a single warning despite leading all the way. Tsybulskaya was a clear second and in third place Perrone and Plätzer crossed the line together. Perrone was given the verdict over the Norwegian, who was disqualified anyway.

At her seventh attempt, Nikolayeva became World Champion. The 37 year-old had won a bronze medal (at 10K) in 1995, the year before becoming Olympic Champion. She won in Paris with a championship record and no warnings.

After the first two laps (5K), the Russian was a close third behind O'Sullivan and Perrone. By 10K, she had a 20-second lead which had more than doubled by 15K. O'Sullivan was a clear second from Gudkova, Giordano and Tsybul'skaya. The Belarusian came through for the bronze in a new national record. The 2001 winner Ivanova led out of the stadium but retired after six minutes clutching an injured hamstring.

Ivanova, holder of the fastest-ever time (an unratified 1:24:50 in 2001), and teenager Jiang were the early leaders. They passed 5Km in 21:43. Jiang dropped back and was disqualified before halfway, leaving Ivanova (42:54) with a yawning lead of more than a minute over Turova (43:59). Ivanova kept piling on the pace passing 15Km in 64:05 (another 21:11 split), before finishing in an official world record of 1:25:41, beating the Belarusian by 1:25. Feitór won the bronze medal with seven seconds to spare from the fast-closing Vasco. It had not been a good day for Olympic Champions, as 2004 winner Athanasia Tsoumeléka was disqualified when in fourth place with 4Km to go, while defending champion and 1996 Olympic Champion Nikolayeva failed to finish. The youthful-looking Ivanova, mother of a 15 year-old daughter, was the only one of the top six not to set a personal best, yet ironically her record netted her a $100,000 bonus to go with the $60,000 awarded to each individual winner in Helsinki.

In wet, hot (29°C) and humid (70%) conditions, Kaniskina dominated the event, leading Shemyakina by 20 seconds at 5Km (22:21), and almost doubling the margin to 44 seconds at halfway (44:33). Shemyakina was, in turn, almost half a minute clear of Vasco (45:53). The order remained the same for the rest of the race, with Kaniskina slowing up only in the last quarter, covered in 23:23. She won by 33 seconds from Shemyakina, while Vasco closed up to finish only five seconds behind the number two Russian. Fastest of all in the closing stages was Plätzer, whose final 5Km took just 22:38. The European Champion from Belarus, Rita Turova, had two sub 1:28 clockings in 2007 and the European Cup title under her belt, but scratched from the event for medical reasons.

Kaniskina was the clear favourite, having won comfortably in Osaka in 2007, and Beijing 2008. The Russian followed the pace for a quarter of the race, reaching 5Km in 23:20. Shortly after she took the lead, covering the next two 5Km stretches in 21:38 and 21:24 to lead by almost a minute from Loughnane and Hong.

Loughnane won the battle for second, beating Liu by 12 seconds in 1:28:58, gaining 17 seconds on Kaniskina in the last quarter of the race. The temperature, which rose from 27° at the start of the race to 30° by the end, was the prime factor in keeping the time as the slowest winning effort since 1999.

In January 2015, the Russian Anti-Doping Agency banned Kaniskina because of anomalies in her biological passport. They announced a three-year suspension for her backdated to 2012. Kaniskina's results over two separate intervals in 2009 and 2011 were also annulled. Those periods included the Berlin and Daegu World Championships, but the IAAF subsequently filed an appeal with the Court of Arbitration for Sport regarding the "selective disqualification of results applied by RUSADA" to Kaniskina and five other Russians. The CAS upheld the IAAF's appeal and in March 2016 it was confirmed a three year and two month ban to December 2015 and disqualification all competitive results since August 15, 2009. All of which meant that Loughnane became Ireland's second female World Champion besides Sonia O'Sullivan.

Aiming to be the first three-time winner in the event (or so we thought) Kaniskina stayed within the pack of 13 through halfway (46:16) before increasing the pace with a third 5Km of 21:47. At that point her lead over Kirlyapkina was five seconds. Liu, in third place just three seconds behind Kirlyapkina, got clear of the second Russian to clock 1:30:00, but finished 18 seconds behind the diminutive (1.60m/43kg) Kaniskina. In sixth place (eventually fifth) was Feitor, the only athlete to have competed in 11 World Championships, her best position being third in 2005.

Kaniskina supposedly broke the "curse" of the Daegu daily programme. The cover stars for the first four days of the competition – Steve Hooker, Usain Bolt, Dayron Robles and Yelena Isinbaeva – all failed to win medals. From March 2016, for reasons set out in the report for 2009, Kaniskina could no longer be regarded as a medallist.

The early pace was set by Rigauado and Drahotová, as 5Km was passed in 23:17, with Olympic Champion Lashmanova seven seconds behind. The gap was the same at halfway, with the 18 year-old Czech walker timed in 45:20, a second ahead of Rigauado, Lashmanova and Kirlyapkina. The Russian pair applied pressure over the next quarter of the race, covering that section in 21:27 and accumulating a five-second lead over Rigauado at 15Km. In sixth place was the third Russian Sokolova, who then scythed through the field towards a bronze medal, but was disqualified on reaching the stadium.

Meanwhile, Lashmanova had broken away from Kirlyapkina with a 19th kilometre in 3:58 (1:19:20 pace), but lost a lot of her advantage when becoming confused about the location of the finish when inside the stadium. "The judges didn't really explain to us that we should do one more lap," was her excuse.

Behind the Russians, the battle for bronze was won by Liu, winning her third consecutive World Championship medal. For Lashmanova it was the final gold medal in an annual sequence of five, the previous four being World Youth 2009, World Junior 2010, European Junior 2011 and Olympic Games 2013. In January 2014 she tested positive for a performance-enhancing drug and was banned for two years.

Liu and Lu were the only contenders to have ducked under 1:26 during 2015, and they led throughout the race. At 5Km (2:26), only Drahotová was in touch, and by halfway (44:19) the Chinese duo led by 26 seconds. Olyanovska gained a few seconds on the leading pair in the next quarter, but then Liu/Lu finished off with the fastest 5K section – 21:21. Liu held off Lu as the younger athlete appeared unworried to place second to her more experienced compatriot.

Rightful finalists: Nigeria

The GDR faced tough opposition from the USA, and their cause was not helped by the injury to Heike Drechsler the day before the heats. The world 200m record holder was unable to take her place on the team. The GDR won their heat but were precisely one second slower than the USA's time in the other preliminary race.

In the final, the GDR took the lead on the first leg through individual winner Gladisch. Oschkenat kept that advantage down the back-straight, but the United States went in front after a scintillating bend by the glamorous Florence Griffith. Pam Marshall extended the US lead on the anchor, running away from Marlies Göhr.

With the United States team – minus Evelyn Ashford – missing the final after nearly dropping the baton, the GDR looked unbeatable.

However, in the final, Gladisch committed a false start, and at the second time of asking Canada were away best. On the second leg, the GDR took control through Koch and individual champion Göhr had a decisive lead on the final changeover.

The battle was for the silver and bronze. On the outside lane, Britain's Thomas sprinted clear of Bulgaria and just held off Jamaica's Ottey for second place.

The United States' chequered record in this event continued when their baton was dropped on the first changeover in the heats. This meant that the great Evelyn Ashford missed her final chance for a World Championship medal. The title went to a country which had more than its fair share of relay troubles in the past – Jamaica.

Germany – after an easy 41.91 in the heats – were favourites to win the final. Breuer and Krabbe gave their team an expected lead. They lost some of this on the third leg, but their hopes of winning vanished when anchor runner Drechsler started too early. She had to slow down and look round to collect the baton before the end of the zone. In the process, she lost the advantage she needed over the USSR and Jamaica. Privalova hit the front, only to be passed by the long-striding Ottey. After her disappointment in the individual events, this was one of the most popular victories in Tokyo.

Gail Devers was involved in a photo-finish yet again, but this time her famed dip was not enough to take gold. The Russian team, including three 200m finalists, led with the United States and Jamaica for the first half of the race. The Jamaicans fell back on the third leg while the leading two teams handed over together. The anchor leg brought Devers (lane 3) against Privalova (lane 4). Devers looked as if she might sprint clear, but the Russian refused to be beaten.

Just as in the individual final, the slow-motion replays and photo-finish displays did not identify the winner. Russia were eventually confirmed as the champions. "I was so nervous over the last 20m I shut my eyes," said Privalova. "I didn't know we had won and it seemed like hours rather than minutes before the result was announced."

In third place, Jamaica duplicated their winning time from Tokyo and Merlene Ottey won her 10th world championship medal.

This event was given an extra edge after Torrence's 200m disqualification, from which Ottey was the main beneficiary. The two would each run the anchor leg.

It was Germany who got the best start. The USA and Jamaica had excellent third legs and both Ottey and Torrence received their batons simultaneously. The USA had the sharper exchange, giving Torrence an advantage which she held despite a determined effort by Ottey. The Jamaican's silver was a record 13th World Championship medal.

"We are a great team despite the fact that we couldn't practise very much," said Torrence.

The fastest ever heat time of 41.52 by the Americans suggested the GDR's 1985 world record of 41.37 would be in danger in the final, but the squad had to be content with victory in history's second quickest time of 41.47. Anchored by Devers in 9.86 for her flying 100, the USA won by a good six metres over an Ottey-less Jamaica with France (sans Pérec) setting a national record in third place. The most disappointed team must have been that from Bahamas; their winning heat time of 42.19 would have sufficed for a medal but a bungled baton change put them down to sixth in the final.

Even with Miller and Devers taking the last two legs, the USA (deprived of the injured Jones) were out of the medals as the Bahamian quartette, including Davis in her seventh World Championships, sped around for a Commonwealth record of 41.92, a time bettered only by the GDR, USA and Russia – and that by a nation of little more than quarter of a million people. Thanks to a storming last leg by Arron, France snatched second place ahead of Jamaica, for whom McDonald won a medal for the fourth time at this event. The Canadian team was led off by Bailey (37), a double sprint finalist at the inaugural 1983 World Championships.

Jones collected what would have been her fifth world gold with ease, because her three team-mates combined to give her a lead of three metres over the other anchor leg runners. The United States time of 41.71 was the world's fastest since Athens 1997. Germany took silver ahead of France, for whom Sidibé ran a storming anchor to overtake the Jamaicans. It was France's first medal of the week.

In 2004, the teams in places 2-8 all moved up one after US lead-off runner White admitted doping violations going back to 2000. Her team was disqualified and the golds were awarded to Germany at the Berlin Golden League of 2004. Three years later it was Jones's turn to admit to cheating. A third US team member – Gaines – was also found guilty of a doping offence though unlike the other two not at the actual time of the Edmonton World Championships.

Paris 2003

Final (Aug 30)

1, 161	France	41.78
2, 151	United States	41.83
3, 141	Russia	42.66
4, 151	Ukraine	43.07

The first round previewed a titanic battle between the United States and France, whose teams each won with times of 42.03 and 42.04 respectively. Whereas the French were at full strength in their heat, the US had rested the original individual 100m gold and silver medallists, Kelli White and Torri Edwards. The plan had been to bring those two in for the final, but the prospect of disqualification was hanging over White because of her positive test for a stimulant after the individual 100m. Had she contested the relay, then her team's result would have been ultimately annulled following her later admission of drug-taking. Actually White withdrew herself from consideration, but the US team for the final was still strengthened by the insertion of Edwards on the anchor.

The draw put the USA in lane 4 with France in 6. The two teams were close throughout the race with neither making major mistakes. Edwards got the baton with a slight lead. French anchor Arron was a disappointed sixth/fifth in the individual final but was a renowned relay runner. To the crowd's delight she gradually caught then passed Edwards, giving France their second gold of the day just 20 minutes after that of long jumper Eunice Barber.

7, ¹⁸¹ Nigeria	43.25
8, ¹²¹ Poland	43.49

The United States were the fastest in the heats, clocking 42.16 in the first heat with the Bahamian team failing to finish after Sturup was accidentally knocked over while waiting for the baton at the start of the backstraight. France edged Jamaica in the second race and Belarus won the final heat in 42.80, where Russia messed up their final baton change and did not finish.

Using the same squad in the final, the United States team was led off by Daigle, who ran even with Nesterenko, and a metre ahead of Jamaica. Lee then held Simpson, with Belarus losing ground. Barber extended the US lead to 3m, and 100m winner Lauryn Williams took the US team to a 2m win, as Campbell gained a metre on the last leg. Belarus held on to third place, as Arron closed quickly to take the slow-starting French team from sixth to fourth on the anchor leg. Barber became only the second athlete to win gold in both relays, the other being Gwen Torrence in 1993. Allyson Felix was to follow soon. The winning time was identical to that of 2003.

Felix opened up a gap of a metre on Stewart, and the US lead was increased on the third leg as Barber gained a further metre on Facey. Edwards (10.21) held off Campbell (10.06) by half a metre, though Campbell was closing in rapidly on the American at the finish. Britain led the chasing group at the final exchange, but Gevaert took Belgium from sixth to third with a stirring anchor leg of 10.17.

Rightful finalists: Poland

In the Beijing Olympics neither of the favoured teams, the USA and Jamaica had won a medal. The bad luck continued for the US despite having clocked 41.58 – the best time of the 21st century – two weeks earlier. This time, their third-leg woman Muna Lee suffered an unfortunate injury at the point of changeover.

The Jamaican squad – which controversially omitted Veronica Campbell-Brown – clocked a snappy 41.88 in the heats but were not as quick in the final though Facey was slightly ahead of the Bahamas at the first changeover. Fraser, the 100m winner, added a metre to the Jamaican lead ahead of Sturupp, and Bailey. Stewart began with a 2m lead which she maintained over Ferguson-McKenzie. Germany held off Russia (later disqualified) and Brazil for the bronze medal.

ed over a metre to the good. Felix gained slightly on Stewart, and a better changeover gave the US the advantage. Myers handed to Jeter with nearly 2m advantage over Campbell-Brown, and the 100m champion lost a small portion of that to finish in 41.56, the eighth-fastest ever. Behind them the Ukraine (42.51) were able to hold off Trinidad (42.58) for the bronze medal, though the latter were disqualified when a doping violation of Semoy Hackett was confirmed. This turned out to be just the third time in nine races in the 21st century that both Jamaica and the USA had legitimately finished in a global 4x100 metre championship. Felix collected a record eighth world gold medal (no other woman had more than five), and put her in second place on the list of all medals won with 10 after the 14 of Merlene Ottey.

The heats saw the possibility of a titanic battle with Jamaica taking the first race in 41.87, followed by the USA, who won the second heat in 41.82. Second in those heats were France (42.25) and Brazil (42.29). Of the four teams, only one would have an unsullied race in the final two hours later. Over the first two legs Jamaica and USA had a great battle, with Russell for Jamaica leading Tarmoh, and then Anderson coming back at Stewart after a poor Jamaican baton pass. The race was lost by the USA on the second changeover, when Gardner had to virtually stop to receive the baton after starting far too soon. Jamaica were already 10m down the track when the US baton pass was completed, and with Fraser-Pryce on the last leg, the gold medal was a Jamaican certainty.

The USA were in sixth place at the last changeover, but fought their way to third, which became second when – after having received silver medals – France were belatedly disqualified after a zone infringement at the second changeover. Britain were promoted from fourth to bronze, meaning that their lead-off runner Asher-Smith (17) became the third youngest-ever World Championship medalist after Sally Barsosio (1993 women's 10,000m) and Darrel Brown (2001 men's 4x100m relay).

The Jamaicans were again at full strength with World Champions on legs one and four and new star Thompson on the third. Conversely, the United States were without their number one sprinter Tori Bowie, who was taken out of consideration for the relay pool after missing two relay practice sessions earlier in the summer.

Campbell-Brown gained over a metre on Gardner at the start. Morrison and particularly Thompson stretched the advantage over Felix and Prandini, leading by 1½ metres at the final change-over. In third was Trinidad and Tobago just ahead of the Netherlands, who botched their take-over and were disqualified. Fraser-Pryce gained over four metres on the anchor, with Jamaica running 41.08, the second-fastest time ever.

4 x 400 Metres Relay Helsinki 1983

Final (Aug 14)

1,	GDR	3:19.73
2,	Czechoslovakia	3:20.32
3,	USSR	3:21.16
4,	Canada	3:27.41
5,	United States	3:27.57

7,	Bulgaria	3:30.36
8,	Romania	3:35.61

A third Helsinki gold medal for Jarmila Kratochvílová looked a distinct possibility, especially as the GDR would apparently be without Marita Koch, who had not raced at 400m all year.

Czechoslovakia, the GDR and the USSR dominated the final from start to finish. By putting individual silver medallist Kocembová on the first leg, the Czechs expected to get a big lead and this they managed when a terrific 48.93 split gave her team an advantage of 15m. The two Czech "weak links", Matejkovičová and Moravčíková, followed. Matejkovičová lost all that advantage on the second leg as the GDR, through Sabine Busch, moved ahead. Then came the GDR's masterstroke: the unexpected insertion of Koch on stage three.

Less than three hours after taking the 200m title, Koch sped away from the opposition to open up a 25m gap with a split of 48.55. Some of this ground was, however, lost on the final changeover. Rübsum started a little early and Koch had to lunge three times before the baton was successfully passed. The USSR were now a clear second.

The GDR's lead proved too much for Kratochvílová, who nevertheless moved into second place with a brilliant 47.75. The winning time was the fourth quickest ever, and might well have been a world record had it not been for the fumble on the last exchange.

"That last race was the hardest," said Koch. "I could feel every one of the 11 races I had already run."

Sabine Busch claimed her third World Championship gold medal when she comfortably held off individual champion Olga Bryzgina on the anchor leg.

The GDR looked vulnerable without Marita Koch and were only fifth after the first changeover. However, Emmelmann's stint of 49.1 followed by Müller's 48.64 gave Busch a 15m advantage at the last changeover. The United States were an isolated third.

The United States opened up a big lead on the first leg but were reeled in by the Soviet Union. Thanks to a sub-49 leg by Olga V. Nazarova, Bryzgina – the reigning Olympic Champion – took over level with Lillie Leatherwood on the anchor leg. The American proved to be no match for Bryzgina, who won her third (and the USSR's final) World Championship gold.

Germany's bronze medal was due to the inclusion of double sprint champion Krabbe on the second leg. She clocked 49.8 to bring her team up from sixth to third. They lost this place temporarily to Great Britain before Breuer produced the fastest split of the day on the anchor leg.

The 500m stagger often hides the quickest runners on the first leg of a 4x400m relay. Not so this time because sprint star Torrence produced the astonishing time of 49.0 to give the United States a huge lead. There had been some debate behind the scenes about the composition of the US relay team. Gwen Torrence and hurdle stars Kim Batten and Tonja Buford were being considered by the coaching staff, but the main relay squad rejected this proposal.

In the event, the US won easily. Britain led at the first changeover before Russia and the USA moved clear. On both the second and third legs, the Russian runner started quickly before fading and succumbing to their US rivals. A 49.56 anchor by Miles secured the US victory. Hurdles medallist Hemmings overtook the Russian anchor to finish second for Jamaica.

The second fastest split of the race was 49.57 by Cathy Freeman, who brought Australia from a distant sixth to fourth, then third when Jamaica were disqualified for a lane infringement.

Races don't come much more exciting than this one as four teams were still in contention at the last change-over. As the runners entered the final straight it was Alekseyeva of Russia leading from Richards of Jamaica, Miles-Clark of USA and Breuer of Germany. Based on form in the individual 400m it looked as though Richards (2nd) and Miles-Clark (3rd) would fight it out, as indeed they did, but for silver. It was Breuer, only fourth in the 400m but always a notch better in relays, who dug deepest. She powered past a struggling Alekseyeva on the inside and stole a march on the other two to complete her leg in 48.69. Having been suspended at the time of the last two editions, these were her first World Championships since, as a junior, she finished second in the 400m in 1991. Miles-Clark ran her anchor in 49.19 and Richards 49.45.

The USA led narrowly from Russia for the first two legs thanks to Reid and Malone-Wallace, but Kotlyarova took the Russians into a four metre lead on the third stage and Nazarova, with a very mature run, just held off Miles-Clark on the anchor. Rucker and Breuer (with the race's fastest split of 49.04) on the final two legs hoisted Germany into third place, only a stride or two behind the leading duo. The highly rated Nigerians did not show up for their heat.

Jamaica, a country with a share of bad luck in World Championship and Olympic relays, benefited from a terrible mistake by the United States anchor runner. The race started well for the USA when Miles-Clark – seeking a fifth successive world relay medal – opened up with a 50.2 first leg. Hennagan moved further away with a 49.7 on the second leg, and Collins held a 10m advantage over Parris. Halfway through the third stage. Parris herself was 10m up on the Germans, and the Jamaican then closed slightly on Collins.

The US anchor runner Reid would have wanted a cushion over her Jamaican counterpart, who was the World and Olympic silver medallist Fenton. Collins delivered a 7m advantage, then suddenly Fenton emerged as the clear leader on the first bend. The Unfortunate Reid had received the baton safely, but then dropped it when passing it from her left to her right hand. It bounced behind her onto the infield and by the time she retrieved it, 40m and a certain medal had been lost. Jamaica went on to win in a Commonwealth record of 3:20.65. Observers felt that without the dropped baton, there would have been a great race between Fenton and Reid. A month later at the Goodwill Games in Brisbane, the same teams clashed again with the US defeating Jamaica 3:24.63 to 3:24.87.

The United States made amends for their 2001 disappointment; this time it was the opposition who suffered at the final changeover. European Champion Zykina put Russia in front after leg one. Pechonkina increased that lead but the US were still contention at halfway, while Jamaica were also within range. On the third leg it was 200m champion-elect Kapachinskaya versus the hugely experienced Miles-Clark. The American closed to within 2m. Kapachinskaya exchanged to Nazarova, but the incoming Russian was momentarily blocked by the Senegalese anchor Thiam, who strolled illegally from the waiting echelon into lane 1 before her incoming team-mate had arrived. An unobstructed exchange between Miles-Clark and Sanya Richards popped the US team into a lead of 2m.

One felt that the American – still a junior – might succumb to Nazarova (fourth individually) and/or individual silver medalist Fenton who ran a brilliant first 300m to make up around 10m on the leading pair. However the 18 year-old ran a well-judged leg to hold on to her lead. Fenton could not quite get past the Russian despite clocking far and away the fastest split of the race, 49.38.

Russia won the first heat in a world leading 3:20.32, with Krasnomovets and Antyukh on the first two legs sealing their places in the final with legs of 50.1 and 49.4. The USA won the other heat in 3:23.38 and a great final was in prospect, except that lead-off runner Suziann Reid ran out of her lane, dooming her team to disqualification as did Moushami Robinson, who illegally switched position while waiting to start the third leg. One felt pity for Reid as she had been the one to drop the baton four years earlier in Edmonton.

Russia's Pechonkina started slowly in the final, but led Jamaica by a metre at the first handover. Krasnomovets gradually extended the lead in the last 100m of the second stage to 5m with a 49.7 split, as Novlene Williams ran 49.92 for Jamaica, some 10m ahead of Britain and Poland. The margin was 20m after Antyukh's leg, with Jamaica and Poland neck and neck. Pospelova finished 20 metres clear of Jamaica, running the same time as Fenton (50.42), with Britain just holding off Poland for the bronze medal.

Shericka Williams gave Jamaica the lead in the final, surprisingly heading Britain's new World Champion Ohuruogu 50.5 to 50.6. The tenor of the race changed on the second leg. Lloyd kept Jamaica in front till just before the 600m point, when Felix went past. The double 200m World Champion had covered her first half in 22.2, and she kept going to record 48.0 for her leg, giving the USA a 10m advantage they would maintain to the finish. Jamaica were four metres clear of Russia and Britain were a similar margin behind the Russians. Veshkurova and McConnell ran the fastest third legs, leaving Jamaica just one metre ahead of Russia at the final take-over. Richards kept the USA clear of trouble with a well-judged 49.07 anchor. Williams's 48.93 was enough to hold off Sanders for the silver medal, despite the Briton's 48.76 leg which took her past Antyukh just before the finish. The US time was the fastest in the championships since 1993.

Dunn gave the US the lead in the final with a 50.5 opening leg, 2m clear of Kapachinskaya, with Jamaica a further 5m behind. As she had done in Osaka and Beijing, Felix then settle the race, extending the USA lead to 10 metres with a 48.8 leg, as Firova (49.9) was almost caught by Williams-Mills's 49.6. Demus maintained the USA lead with a 50.14 leg, while Russia stayed 3m clear of Jamaica. Richards then ran the fastest lap of her career – 48.44 to give the USA a 25m win, while Shericka Williams outran Krivoschapka by a full second to win Jamaican silver. For Felix, this was a sixth world gold.

Eight years later the Russian lead-off runner Kapachinskaya, and therefore her entire relay team, were disqualified after she failed retests of her doping samples from the Beijing Olympics and Daegu World Championships. It wasn't the first time she had been involved in a doping story. Back in 2003, she was promoted to gold in the World Championship 200m following the disqualification of Kelli White (USA). One year later, the Russian was herself stripped of the 2004 world indoor 200m title after testing positive for a banned substance. This time she was suspended to 2020 with more than 60 results disqualified, including 2011 where she won individual and relay bronzes.

Ukraine and Russia were ultimately removed from the results when Yefremova (2012) then Kapachinskaya (2017) were disqualified for doping offences which dated back to before their Daegu appearances. As in 2009, Russia forfeited the bronze medals. Their heat performance was also annulled (under IAAF rule 41.1), even though Kapchinskaya was rested for that round.

When all these details were confirmed (in late June 2017), Ohuruogo emerged as a six-time medallist. She had been part of the British teams which had originally finished third in 2005, 2007, 2013 and 2015, as well as fourth in 2009 and 2011. Her 2013 bronze turned to silver because of that year's disqualification of Antonina Krivoschapka. With Kapachinskaya also out of the equation, both those fourth places became bronzes.

Whyte for Jamaica was second, six metres behind, just ahead of Krivoschapka (50.3). On the second leg, Felix (49.2) extended the lead slightly over Prendergast. Beard and Williams-Mills both ran 49.84 for their legs, with Jamaica now six metres ahead of Russia.

McCorory anchored the USA in 49.52, a leg which featured a fast first half and a laboured last 50m, but she got home five metres clear of Shericka Williams who ran 49.22, the same time as Kapachinskaya in third. For Richards-Ross, it was a record fourth 4x4 gold.

The United States were missing Allyson Felix, such a key contributor to their previous victories, but unavailable following her hamstring tear in the Moscow 200m. Nevertheless the defending champions opened up a lead of three metres on the first stage, which Hastings extended to 10m before Firova gained all of the lost ground in the finishing straight. On stage three, Ryzhova put Russia clear by a couple of metres. Krivoschapka was able to pull further away on the anchor. With 200m remaining, her lead was seven metres, but McCorory pulled back all but two in an enthralling last 100m. Britain were third, while potential medallist Jamaica were disqualified in the heats when Whyte ran out of her lane on the first leg.

Russia's win enabled the hosts to end the championships on top of the Moscow gold medal table with seven golds to six by the United States, but that situation was temporary. The Russian gold total was reduced to six (with fewer silvers than the USA) once Krivoschapka's doping offence was revealed, as noted under the report of the individual women's 400m in Moscow. Under IAAF rule 41.1 the entire Russian relay squad were disqualified, including the team which won their heat without Krivoschapka.

Final (Aug 30)

1,	Jamaica	3:19.13
2,	United States	3:19.44
3,	Great Britain NI	3:23.62
4,	Russia	3:24.84
5,	Ukraine	3:25.94
6,	France	3:26.45
7,	Canada	3:27.69
	Nigeria	DQ (r40.9) (3:25.11)

Rightful finalists: Italy

Day led for Jamaica at the first exchange in 50.3, with former World Champions Oheruogu and Richards-Ross a surprisingly long way behind. Jackson's excellent 49.5 served to extend the lead to almost 20m. McPherson ran a solid leg of 50.19 for Jamaica, but was totally eclipsed by Felix, who ran one of the fastest ever relay legs – 47.72 – to give the USA a four-metre lead. McCorory held off the vastly experienced Williams-Mills until the last 25m, when the Jamaican flowed past to win by three metres. A long way back, the battle for third was clearly won by Britain ahead of Russia and Nigeria, though the latter team was ultimately disqualified thanks to a prior doping violation by Adeoye.

IAAF WORLD ATHLETIC SERIES RESULTS

This section contains the names of the first three finishers at every IAAF World Athletic Series event, plus further IAAF events. The order in which these competitions are listed is that defined in the IAAF's World Athletics Series Technical Regulations. The IAAF World Championships (see from page 89 for full results) take first place in that order. The symbol "x" is shown next to those events where the original podium order was adjusted after a doping-related disqualification.

* In 2008 Jones admitted doping violations dating back to 2000 and was stripped of the five Olympic medals she won that year. The other two women shortlisted in 2000 were Cathy Freeman AUS and Stacy Dragila USA

OLYMPIC GAMES

The second IAAF Congress in Berlin 1913 declared that the Olympic Games should serve as their World Championships, which was the case until the first IAAF World Championships of 1983. There are several shades of opinion over the details of early Olympic results. Names, nationalities and even representative countries were not always documented. Further comments are welcomed by the Editor

The symbol "x" is shown for those events where a medallist was definitely disqualified for a doping offence
The symbol "O" indicates an event where a medallist has been sanctioned by the IOC for a doping offence, but the case remained open to appeal as at June 30, 2017. In these seven cases, the result has not been amended here, but fourth place is shown.

Finally, in the 2012 women's 800m and 1500m, the IOC has not yet confirmed the logical medal upgrades as at June 30, 2017

* This race was originally won in 10.75 by Marion Jones USA who in 2008 admitted to doping violations and was disqualified. Original silver medalist Katerina Thanou GRE has not been upgraded to gold medal status and remains silver medalist alongside Tanya Lawrence JAM who was promoted from bronze. In December 2009, the IOC spokesman Mark Adams explained that Thanou "disgraced herself and the Olympic movement by avoiding three doping tests ... she admitted anti-doping violations when she accepted a two-year suspension from the IAAF. The rankings in the actual race are a matter for the IAAF, and they are changed, but the actual awarding of any medal is not a right. Therefore, in this case, it will not happen. It is felt that with her conduct, she did not deserve to be honoured with this recognition."

Crystal Cox, who ran in the heats for the winning team in 2004, was disqualified for doping violations dating back to November 2001 and her personal medal was withdrawn. Despite this, in June 2013, the IOC decided not to re-allocate the other medals awarded in this event

Olympic Games Placing Tables

Here, points are awarded for the first eight placings in each event, with eight for first place down to one for 8th. For ties, points are divided between the countries involved, so that for instance equal second place by two athletes is worth 6.5 points for each country. Points are only awarded for athletes who finished in the final, none are given to those who did not finish or were disqualified. As we go to press there are a number of doping cases in progress and others which have been partially concluded. We have strived to include the latest news and respect that it is the prerogative of the IOC to issue upgraded medals in the wake of doping disqualifications. A revised placing may not necessarily be accompanied with a re-issued medal, as is the case with the winner of the 2000 Olympic 100m final, Katerina Thanou (see note on page 437).

These tables should therefore be regarded as showing placings rather than medals. The editor understands that besides Thanou, the only other athletes who have not yet been rewarded with upgraded medals are Eşref Apak TUR and Vadim Devyatovski BLR (originally third and fourth in the 2004 men's hammer throw) and Nadezhda Ostapchuk BLR (originally fourth in the 2004 women's shot put). The consequences are confusing. Greece have nine first places, but only eight golds (and one more silver than their 13 second places because Thanou was left with her original silver). Turkey has one second place and no third, but no silver and one bronze. Belarus have eight third places, but only six actual bronzes. Apart from that all placings and medals should match, though note that at June 30, 2017, the IOC's medal re-allocation process is still active for the 2012 Women's 800m and 2012 women's 1500m.

There are seven further events where appeal proceedings are open (as at June 30, 2017), following an IOC statement of sanction. These are the 2008 men's 4x100m, women's high jump, long jump, triple jump, javelin throw & heptathlon and the 2012 women's heptathlon. In these cases, the original result is reflected in these tables. The athletes concerned are shown across pages 451-453.

- Incorporating two golds for Jim Thorpe (who was originally disqualified after winning the 1912 Pentathlon and Decathlon)
- Incorporating placings by Germany, the FRG (1952-1988) and the GDR (1956-1988)
- In the years 1896-1920, Irish athletes competed with Great Britain. For the purpose of the tables, placings are combined with those from Great Britain & Northern Ireland (GBR). From 1924, Ireland (IRL) competed independently
Incorporating silvers in 1900 200m flat & hurdles by Indian-born Norman Pritchard
- Australia, Great Britain & Ireland, France and the USA appear with fractions in the "Gold" and "Silver" columns. This is because teams of mixed nationalities won medals in the 1900 5000m Team Race (GBR/AUS) and the 1904 Four Miles Team Race (USA/FRA)
- Incorporating Australasian bronze in 1908 3500m walk
- Incorporating Yugoslavian placings in 1924-1988. In 1992, Yugoslav athletes competed as Independent Olympic Participants (IOP). Placings by Yugoslavia in 1996-2004 are attributed to Serbia

* The Court of Arbitration for Sport ruled in 2010 that "at the time of the Sydney Olympic Games there was no specific IOC or IAAF Rule in force that clearly allowed the annulment of the relay team results if one team member was found to have committed a doping offence". This meant that only Jones was disqualified from the medal-winning relay teams and the collective team result in each race was allowed to stand.

WORLD AND CONTINENTAL RECORDS

(as at June 30, 2017)

ABBREVIATIONS & KEY (See also page 7)

IAAF = IAAF world record; IAAF-u20 = IAAF under-20 record; MX = Mixed race (men and women together)

W = Unratified world best; WO = Women-only race; Wu20 = Unratified world under-20 best

Wo35 = World over-35 best; Wo40 = World over-40 best;

AFR = Africa; ASI = Asia; CAC = Central America & Caribbean (includes the countries with borders to Caribbean though not USA)

Com = Commonwealth; EUR = Europe; NAM = North America (CAN & USA); OCE = Oceania; SAM = South America

NOTES

This section shows world, area, Commonwealth and age records (where known) for all events on the world record lists shown under IAAF rules 261 (world records) & 262 (world under-20 records). Significant unratified best performances are also shown

A = made at altitude of 1000m or higher; a = aided road course according to IAAF rule 260.21 (separation between start and finish points more than 50% of race distance or the decrease in elevation greater than one in a thousand; Some areas do recognise additional marks in this category); ^ = awaiting ratification but otherwise valid; h = hand timing; l = timing by photo-electric cell; # = not officially ratified; X = unratified due to no doping control; ? = not timed officially;

Where relevant, the pace is given for world record performances. Where known, the time given is that of the runner who set the record, rather than the pacemaker

In 1998, IAAF rule 260 was revised to allow world records to be set at a facility "with or without a roof" (in other words, indoors or outdoors). This is now covered by IAAF rule 260.2.ii. Accordingly, indoor marks superior to outdoor records and set since 1998 (not 2000 as originally noted) are listed on these pages in addition to outdoor bests

Included are the individual road events which were given world record status from January 1, 2004. These feature many unratified, unofficial and unconfirmed marks for three main reasons. Firstly, most of the IAAF's area federations have not yet established records at these events. Second, several of the world's major long distance races do not take official times en-route for runners and finally – though the final distance not be regarded as aided (see note above) – the intermediate distance may well be. It should also be noted that some federations have ratified road records even though the marks were set on courses such as Boston which do not fulfill IAAF criteria. Any comments and amendments to these records will be gratefully received by the editor.

* The birthdate of Kenneth (Kiprop) Kipkemai KEN was misreported as August 5, 1994 but is apparently August 2, 1984, so his 59:11 Half Marathon (den Haag, 11 Mar 12) is not shown here as a world junior best. Similarly Dennis (Kipruto) Kimetto (Koech) KEN was variously reported to have been born on November 13, 1993 or January 22, 1994, but the compiler understands that January 22, 1984 is his correct birthdate. Therefore his 59:14 Half Marathon (Berlin, 1 Apr 12) should also not be regarded as a world junior best

NATIONAL RECORDS

Here are lists of records, as recognised by all IAAF federations, for every world championship event plus the 3000m. At the end of each event list, footnotes are used to explain irregularities and give reasons why certain significant marks are not regarded as records. Asterisks are shown next to the code of countries where such a note is necessary. Included across the men's and women's sections are more than 500 marks set in 2017 up to June 30. Those are given in bold characters.

Winfried Kramer

NATIONALITIES

Anomalies have been created by transfers of allegiance. Some countries accept records set by athletes in the grey period after they gained fresh citizenship, but before they are eligible to compete at championship level in their new colours. Other federations see things differently, and we now have a European marathon record (2:06:36) which is inferior to the national record of a European country (2:06:10, Turkey). On the other hand, there are countries which do not recognise marks set by newly-eligible athletes. We have attempted to respect the wishes of federations as well as the transfer dates published by the IAAF, but some of these decisions are open to debate.

AUTOMATIC TIMES

These are given to hundredths of a second wherever possible. For sprint events, manual marks are listed only if they are at least 0.24 seconds better than the automatic record. Please note that these marks are given for information only and may not be officially recognised by the respective federations. For 400m and 400m hurdles, only automatic records are given, unless there is no alternative.

RECORDS FOR SUSPENDED NATIONS

Records are listed for Cambodia and South Africa even though the performances may have occurred while those countries were suspended by the IAAF.

ILLEGITIMATE MARKS

Some countries ratify records which the IAAF regard as illegal because of doping violation or wind-assistance. These have been relegated to footnotes with the best legitimate mark given in the main list. However, ratified records set by women in mixed races are shown in the main list with the best non-mixed mark footnoted. Similarly, officially recognised records set on aided marathon courses are shown first and foremost, with alternative bests footnoted in each case.

QUESTIONABLE MARKS

While the IAAF are currently looking into the issue of performance manipulation, some marks regarded as questionable by the compilers are footnoted rather than placed in the main list of records.

RECORDS SET INDOORS

The 1998 change to rule 260 (originally 260.6a, then 260.18a and now covered by 260.2 note ii) enabled indoor marks to be recognised as "absolute" world records. This development has been reflected in the lists, though it should be noted that most federations have not taken account of the rule change. This creates some situations which are hard to explain. The Russian men's high jump record is 2.41 by Ivan Ukhov outdoors, but European Athletics have accepted Ukhov's indoor 2.42 as a European record. Those who do reflect IAAF rules and mix their records, are AUS, DOM, ESP, EST, FRA, GRE, ISV, LTU, NZL, PLW, POL, PUR & SLO. For other federations, where relevant, separate listings are given of those indoor performances which are superior or identical to the ratified mark.

RECORDS IN COMBINED EVENTS

The 2010 rule change (then 260.27, now 260.18) means that a combined event performance is regarded as wind-assisted if the average assisting wind velocity for the three affected events exceeds two metres per second. Previously it was the case that the score would be legal if that condition applied and/or none of the three relevant following "winds" exceeded four metres per second. The narrowing of the criteria means that some existing records (e.g. Larisa Nikitina's Russian heptathlon record of 7007, with winds of 1.4, 1.1 & 4.0) would be judged as windy under today's rule. It has been determined that this rule change should not be applied in retrospect, so such marks are shown as legal in this section.

ABBREVIATIONS & CODES

a = automatically timed but hundredths not reported; i = indoor mark; * = Footnote included; dh = downhill marathon course; ‡ = a superior or identical mark has been achieved indoors, though not ratified as a record

PROGRESSION OF OFFICIAL WORLD RECORDS

This section lists progressive world record performances as ratified by the IAAF or the Fédération Sportive Féminine Internationale (FSFI), which was absorbed by the IAAF in 1936. Though the IAAF was founded in 1912, its first list of world records contained marks which were set as early as 1870.

AUTOMATIC TIMING

From 1975, the IAAF accepted separate, automatic electrically timed records for events up to and including 400m. From 1977 only automatic timing was considered for world records in these events. Automatic timing to hundredths was accepted for events up to and including 10,000m from 1981. Where known, unofficial automatic times are given – in a smaller typeface – next to the ratified “tenth” time. Ratified automatic times are always given in larger type.

INDOOR WORLD RECORDS

From 1998, IAAF rule 260 was amended to state that world records (as opposed to indoor world records) can be set at a facility “with or without” a roof. So far only one event – the women’s pole vault – has been affected by this change, which was not applied retrospectively. Therefore world indoor records set in 2000 and 2001 by Stacy Dragila and Svetlana Feofanova are regarded as “absolute” and appear in these lists.

A similar rule change occurred in the late 1980s, when the 2.42 high jump of Carlo Thränhardt (FRG), made indoors, was accepted as equalling the existing world (outdoor) record. However after that version of the ruling was rescinded, this mark was subsequently deleted as a world record and is not included in this section.

ROAD RECORDS

From January 1, 2004 the IAAF has recognised official world records at 10Km, 15Km, 20Km, Half Marathon, 25Km, 30Km, Marathon, 100Km, Road (Ekiden) Relay and also the 20Km and 50Km Walks. Progressions are also given here for best performances in the road running and walking events prior to their acceptance as official world record events.

OMISSIONS

Except for road events, excluded from this section are unratified marks, performances which were originally accepted as world records then annulled, and indoor-only world records.

The data in this section is based on “Progression of World Best Performances and Official World Records”, edited on behalf of the IAAF originally by Richard Hymans and then Imre Mátraházi.

BEST THREE BY YEAR 1965-2016

These listings show the top three performers in championship events, the Mile and the 3000m each year for the past 52 years. Up to 1977 for sprints, electrically and hand-timed marks have been mixed using the then accepted adjustments of 0.24 for 100/200m and 0.14 for 400m. So for example, Koné's 10.21 is ranked above 10.0 hand in 1967. Times for 120 yard, 440 yard and 880 yard races have been amended respectively by margins of 0.03, -0.26 and -0.6 in order to allow meaningful comparisons with their metric equivalents. Times which have been adjusted in this manner are asterisked. For the jumps and shot put, indoor marks are shown.

Heptathlon

From 2010, IAAF rule 260.27 (now 270.18) stated that – for record purposes – the average wind speed of the three affected events shall not exceed plus two metres per second. The ruling is not retrospective, but if it were then the affected marks are shown with the superscript.*

Road events – world bests and world records

These were accepted by the IAAF as world bests from January 1, 2003 and world records from January 1, 2004. From November 1, 2011 the IAAF specified that “world records in road races for women [were] to be recognised in women only races”, though before that rule was enforced it was decided not to apply it in retrospect, so all existing world records (set in mixed races) remained standing. From November 1, 2013 it was agreed that the IAAF would separately ratify the best marks in single gender (i.e women only) road running races. Therefore two progressions are shown here where relevant. A mixed race record will be ratified even if it is inferior to the equivalent women only mark.

Listed is the progression of world bests prior to official acceptance and superior unratified marks thereafter. Indented are unratified marks those set on uncertified or unaided courses which do not fulfill the criteria specified in IAAF Rule 260.21.b (separation between start and finish points should not be more than 50% of race distance) or 260.21.c (the decrease in elevation should not be greater than one in a thousand). Record ratified by the IAAF are shown in bold. + denotes marks set en route to longer distances.
